Japanese Credits Frozen by United States, Britain In Swift Reprisal for Thrust Into Indo-China; Tokyo Speeds Troop Movement Despite Warning

Germans, Finns Governor Said Put Pressure Firing Friends On Leningrad Of Ellis Arnall

Vitebsk Said Destroyed; Reds Say 3,000,000 Killed Thus Far.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Finnish troops attacking across the northeastern side of Lake Ladoga yesterday were credited with pushing the Russians back to the former Finnish-Russian frontier. In one sector Finnish troops were said to have penetrated 25 miles into Russian territory and in another a Russian regiment was reported wiped out. The movement was said to coincide with a thrust farther south by German forces, between them putting added pressure on the defenders of Leningrad, but leaving the city's main defense lines firm.

A German radio reporter said that Vitebsk, a city of 127,000 and a bastion in the Stalin line, had been wiped out.

Lines Said Firm.
In a broadcast from the city, which is 90 miles northwest of Smolensk, the reporter declared, "One can only say a city once was here."

He said it was 95 per cent destroyed, principally by retreating Soviet soldiers who went from house to house, ordered out the occupants and burned the buildings.

There were only scanty official reports but what news there was from that mighty battlefield indicated that the Russian lines themselves still were substantially unchanged in every major theater.

The Nazi high command specifically acknowledged stiff Russian resistance and made only the familiar allegation that the offensive was proceeding "according to plan."

3,000,000 Said Slain.
Unofficial Berlin sources went a little further. They declared specifically that the far northern Finnish drive had forced a passage between Lakes Ladoga and Onega and was menacing the Murmansk-Leningrad railway, probably in the Petrozavodsk sector, where the Russians reported heavy fighting.

Berlin military dispatches asserted that 10,000 Red prisoners and more than 100 cannon had been captured about Mogilev, which is along the central front but well behind the Nazi salients long since established in that area, and that the Soviet dead there far exceeded the number of captives.

A Soviet political commentator declared that 3,000,000 persons had been killed thus far in the Russian-German war, but did not undertake to distinguish between the losses of attackers and defenders.

H. Inman Talbot, of Pension Division, Is Discharged.

Fired yesterday as auditor of the Confederate Pension Department, H. Inman Talbot, of Newnan, charged that the Governor was trying to punish friends of Attorney General Ellis Arnall by discharging them, even though they supported the Governor in his last campaign.

Miss Lillian Henderson, Confederate pension director, received orders from the executive department to dismiss Talbot August 1, but no reasons were assigned for the action.

Asked what was the reason for the order, Carlton Mobley, assistant attorney general attached to the Governor's office, said:

"No reason at all that I know of. We are hiring and firing every day. It's just one of those things."

Work Is Praised.
State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr. praised Talbot's work in his audit of the department released this week. In this audit Thrasher said:

"The records of this department were found neat and accurate, and we wish to express our appreciation to the staff of this office for their co-operation and to commend them for their efforts in complying with the financial restrictions placed on them."

Talbot and Arnall are fellow-townsmen and frequently ride to and from work together. Because of this association, Talbot frequently was seen in Arnall's office. He has been an employee of the state for the past two years at a salary of $200 per month.

Governor Called Narrow.
Pointing out that Arnall had been a devoted friend to him and his family, Talbot praised the attorney general as "a gentleman of the highest type," and added that "the Governor is so narrow he could walk in the shadow of a constable all day long and never be seen."

"The fact that I was directed to leave my duties for four days and nights in the recent contest for the four-year amendment—and incidentally the district in my home county was carried by a vote of 4 to 1 for the favored amendment—did not mean a thing to the Governor," Talbot said.

Referring again to the attorney general, Talbot continued:

"Since he has incurred the en-

DO IT YOURSELF—This old axiom was taken literally yesterday by Mrs. Gladys Roberts, of 814 Drewry street, N. E., as the strike of city sanitary department laborers continued. The sanitary department said drivers would come on call, but could not load the trucks—that would be up to the private citizen. So, undismayed, Mrs. Roberts dragged and pulled, and got rid of the garbage. Looking on is the truck driver, J. T. Osburn.

UP AND OVER—Here is another view of Mrs. Roberts going through the enforced calisthenics of loading garbage on a city sanitary truck. The container is smaller than the one in the other photograph, but it was hard work just the same. W. H. Posey, truck driver, gives Mrs. Roberts a bit of a lift with the container. Scenes like this were not uncommon in Atlanta yesterday, as folks just got plumb tired of waiting. (Story on Page 6).

F. D. R. Voices Disapproval of Wheeler's Act

Editorial Captions Cover the Situation, He Asserts.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(P)—President Roosevelt today expressed his disapproval of the action of Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, arch-foe of the administration's foreign policy, in mailing post cards to men in the Army asking that they actively oppose involvement in the war.

At a press conference in his home at Hyde Park, the chief executive referred to editorials in the New York Herald Tribune and New York Times captioned "On Dangerous Ground" and "Mr. Wheeler Goes Too Far." The captions, he said, covered the situation.

For months, Wheeler on one side, and the President and his aides on the other, have engaged in a running battle in which harsh words have become commonplace.

Total Blockade Would Cripple Japan in 6 Months, Experts Say

Gains in Indo-China Would Not Keep Industry Going If U. S., Britain Enforced Economic Boycott.

LONDON, July 25.—(P)—A total economic blockade by the United States and the British Empire would cripple Japanese industry within six months of an outbreak of war with Japan, British economic warfare experts said tonight.

Japanese occupation of French Indo-China will bolster the empire's stocks of five basic commodities but even these gains, which experts called "one of the chief reasons for the move into Indo-China," would be outweighed by the effects on Japanese industry and export trade of strict economic sanctions.

The statement was made in full knowledge of "immense stocks" of war material bought by Japan in the world's markets for the last two years.

Anticipating the Japanese move into Indo-China, already a matter of agreement in principle between Vichy and Tokyo, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told parliament today that "certain defense measures in Malaya already have been enforced" to meet "the potential threat."

Announcement Cheered.
Cheers came from the house of commons when Eden said Britain had been in "close communication with the United States" on the turn of events in the Far East.

Here, according to these experts, is the Japanese import balance sheet, a foundation on which she must continue to maintain more than 2,500,000 troops in the field, equip and supply the world's third largest navy and expand an already large air force.

Iron Ore: Japan is dependent on the United States and Britain for 73 per cent; British India supplies another 21 per cent.

Scrap Iron: American supplies cut to almost nothing; Japan now living off accumulated stores.

Pig Iron: Supply drastically cut from British India.

Big Oil Stocks.
Oil: Japan has "enormous stocks" on hand, but modern war demands are proportionately great.

If the United States "clamps down on oil shipments, Venezuelan oil would be available 'until United States influence in South America is exerted,' according to the British."

Copper: Japan purchased heavily in Chile, United States and Canada; sources in British Empire now almost nothing and stocks in Japan are said to be dwindling steadily.

Lead: Formerly bought mostly in Burma, Australia, Canada and United States.

Zinc: Buying position in the British Empire identical with that of lead; American defense priorities taking much that once went to Japan.

Tin: Japan was once one of the leading tin customers of Malaya

Embree Seeks Race Mixture, Talmadge Says

Rosenwald Fund Head Is Attacked in Radio Address.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Governor Talmadge asserted last night that the president of the Rosenwald Fund seeks "an amalgamation of the two races in America."

In a radio address over Station WSB, the Governor outlined his account of the ousting of two Georgia educators by the Board of Regents on his charges that they advocated racial co-education and were sponsored by the Julius Rosenwald Fund.

He declared Edwin R. Embree, Rosenwald president, "advocates the co-mingling of the races, using the same parks, the same hotels, the same golf courses, the same restaurants, the same libraries and the same schools," in a book "Brown America."

Meetings Described.
In his prepared address, Talmadge asserted: "It is hard to believe that any white man, north or south, would preach such a doctrine. You would say that he could not get anywhere with it. But, you forget that the Rosenwald Fund had the power to give away forty million dollars."

The Governor detailed successive meetings of the Board of Regents leading up to the decision after an open hearing last week not to rehire Dean Walter D. Coking of the University of Georgia College of Education and President Marvin S. Pittman of the Georgia Teachers' College.

He asserted that Regent Chairman Sandy Beaver reported to the meeting of the regents at Athens when Coking and Pittman were first dropped from the system that President Harmon W. Caldwell, of the university, had offered his resignation if Coking were not given a hearing.

Men Are Smart.
This resulted in the closed hearing later, at which the regents voted to retain Coking. Subsequently Talmadge shuffled the regent membership, held a public hearing and the educators were dropped.

The Governor declared the Rosenwald fund added to salaries of university professors and other college teachers "to try to persuade them, or blind their vision and get them to believing that we should have co-education of the races in Georgia."

"Remember this: Such men as Embree, Coking and Pittman are smart. They knew that they could not come boldly into the front

40,000 Jap Soldiers Held Ready To Start Occupation of Bases

Million Men Reported Called to Arms; Chinese Assets Blocked To Aid Chiang Kai-Shek Cause.

Acting with swiftness and determination and in blunt answer to Japan's move in French Indo-China, President Roosevelt yesterday froze all assets of the aggressor nation in this country and further tied up Chinese funds as a protective measure for the Chiang Kai-shek government.

The United States move, though expected generally, came earlier than looked for, Roosevelt making the announcement from his Hyde Park home as the Nipponese intensified troop movements despite an earlier Washington warning.

It was said earlier in Saigon, Indo-China, Japan had 40,000 to 50,000 troops on hand to occupy the newly acquired bases over the weekend and in Shanghai it was declared Japan had called up an additional million men to serve under the Japanese flag.

Million Men Called to Arms

SAIGON, French Indo-China, July 25.—(P)—Japan will swiftly pour thousands of troops and war equipment into newly won military, naval and air bases in southern French Indo-China, starting this weekend, usually reliable sources reported tonight.

Major General Raishiro Sumita, chief of the Japanese military mission in Indo-China, was expected to arrive here tomorrow from Hanoi to direct the operation.

(Foreign sources in Shanghai said they heard from Saigon that Japan would land between 40,000 and 50,000 troops in Indo-China July 30. Foreign intelligence reports in Shanghai also said that "upwards of 1,000,000 men" were being called to arms in Japan in the greatest mobilization since outbreak of the war with China four years ago.

At Coastal Points.
(The Japanese news agency Domei reported in a dispatch from Nanking that the Chinese government at Chungking had ordered troops to proceed to Indo-China's northern border.)

Japan has won the right to post troops at several coastal points in southern Indo-China, as well as to station warships in Camranh Bay and at Saigon and to establish several air bases in the southern part of the colony, it was reported authoritatively.

Informal sources said "several thousand" Japanese troops would be stationed at Saigon and along the southeast Indo-China coast and within Cambodia, which is on the Gulf of Siam, along Indo-China's border with Thailand (Siam).

All of these positions into which Japan is moving bring her closer

Capital Moves To Showdown

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(P)—In swift retaliation for Japan's push into French Indo-China, President Roosevelt tonight froze Japanese assets in the United States, including Nippon's ships, and similarly tied up Chinese assets so that the Axis cannot get at them.

Britain followed suit, announcing four hours later that assets and credits of Japan in the British Empire had been frozen. At London, informed sources made no estimate of the amount of Japanese assets affected, but suggested they were substantial, especially in Far Eastern colonies and Australia.

There were signs that the Netherlands government in London also would take parallel action.

(At Ottawa, Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King announced shortly after the United States action was revealed that "the necessary steps have been taken to prevent the withdrawal of assets in Canada belonging to residents of Japan.")

(One spokesman said he understood that for all practical purposes the assets in Canada of residents of Japan had been frozen for a week at least. He said he believed that if any Japanese ships were in Canadian ports they would not be allowed to leave.)

The Japanese government announced in Tokyo it had undertaken "joint defense" of French Indo-China with the French.

A White House statement, issued here and at Hyde Park, declared that the action was "designed among other things to prevent the use of the financial facilities of the United States and trade between Japan and the United States, in ways harmful to SHINE YOUR HAT, MADAM?—Just to help out a bit in the drive to collect aluminum for Uncle Sam's airplanes, these three young women, Mrs. Marjorie Apps, Rebekah Hogan and Frances Richardson (left to right), yesterday donned aluminum headgear, and it's probably the first time any women ever had their pans on top of their heads. And for a woman, a chapeau with a handle is unique! It was their way of attracting attention to the drive to collect aluminum. (Story on Page 2).

Fat-Ugly Women! There Ought To Be a Law, Says Miss Putnam

NEW YORK, July 25.—(P)—Women who allow themselves to grow unattractively obese, says Nina Wilcox Putnam, should be punished by law.

"Women, no matter what age, can be attractive—if they're not too lazy," the author of 1,200 pieces of fiction, about 1,000 magazine articles and 28 books, said today.

"It is offensive to see a fat-ugly woman in public and there should be a law against it," she said. "Take Turkey. There they are punished if they get too fat. That idea should be brought here. I know a lot of men who would vote for it."

For the last two months Miss Putnam has been undergoing strenuous routines, with an eye to reducing and looking and feeling younger.

Today, at 59, she displays the ginger and vitality of a high school girl.

"And when the rejuvenating program is finished," she said, "I'll look and act like 18. I get younger day by day."

When the phone in the next room rang, the white-haired Miss Putnam sprang from her deep chair and darted across the room with ease and grace.

For the woman who can afford it, she prescribes attention by a beauty culturist, for others "exercise, proper dieting and cleanliness, with emphasis on cleanliness."

Philippine Islands Are to Japan What Czechs Were to Germans

Nippon Believes U. S. Is Not Taking Full Advantage of Natural Resources of Its Unweaned Colonial Problem Child; Ore Deposits Tempting.

By EDWIN HARTTICH.

(North American Newspaper Alliance.)
LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 25.—Now that the Japanese have moved into French Indo-China without meeting with any opposition their next objective may be the Philippine islands.

The Philippines are as much of a temptation to Tokyo as Czechoslovakia was to Nazi Germany—and like Hitler, the Japanese intend eventually to control this unweaned colonial problem child of Uncle Sam. To a European observer, there are many parallels between the Philippines and the now dismembered Czechoslovakia.

The Japanese want these islands for several reasons. First, there is a billion-ton open deposit of high-grade iron ore as yet undeveloped on the island of Mindanao. Second, the island can be developed agriculturally to support an extra 40,000,000 persons over and above the present population of 16,000,000 Filipinos. Third, the Japanese have made plans for a new naval base at Dumanigilas Bay on the island of Mindanao which could dominate the Dutch East Indies and the whole of Malaya. Fourth, the Japanese see that neither the Americans nor the Filipinos are fully developing the great natural resources of the islands; so it is a case of "step aside and let somebody else have a chance," according to their logic.

Number One Objective.
Japanese engineers and geologists have thoroughly explored the island of Mindanao, which is the number one objective. They have selected the site of their proposed naval base. Other engineers have found that through a system of dams, the abundant water supply can be harnessed to furnish electric power for an "Oriental Pittsburgh" to be built some day on Mindanao.

At present the United States government is spending millions of dollars in the Philippines to build up its defenses. The flow of gold will cease in 1946, and it will leave a large hole in the economy of the islands. Besides, as a sovereign state the products of the Philippines will have to pay duty to enter the American markets. These factors dampen the independence feeling among the upper class and better informed Filipinos.

The Filipinos have become aware of the possibility of the war touching the islands. But the citizens and the government leaders have dumped all their defense problems into the laps of the United States Army and Navy. The commonwealth government is engaged in dodging any financial expense for defense that can be shouldered onto the Americans.

Until a few months ago American naval and army officers were pessimistic about the defense of the Philippines. This was due to the lack of modern equipment, such as anti-aircraft guns, coastal guns and bomber and fighter planes. Some of the best pursuit ships in the Philippine navy were four and five years old. However, in the last few months this situation has been remedied. Every ship brings new military equipment for use of the Army and Navy.

Corridor Is Key.
The key to the whole American defense of the Philippines lies in Corregidor—a small rocky island in the middle of the entrance of Manila Bay. Corregidor has been transformed into the Gibraltar of the Pacific. The small island bristles with anti-aircraft guns, and six and 12-inch coastal artillery batteries. These gun emplacements have been carved out of the volcanic rock, and with tunnels. It is "Stuka-proof," as one officer described its fortifications.

No civilian has been allowed on the island for more than a year. The development of the rocky island into a tremendous and powerful fortress—the equal of the defense of any guarded island—has been kept a closely guarded secret.

The salient fact is that if America doesn't stop the Japanese in the Far East, no other power can do the job. The British at Singapore and the Dutch in the East Indies have been rushing the defenses of the Straits settlement and Java. The Malay jungle north of Singapore is filled with Australian and Empire troops. A series of defense posts has been carved out of the jungles, tied up with secret air bases and fortifications. This defense system protects Singapore from land attacks in the rear.

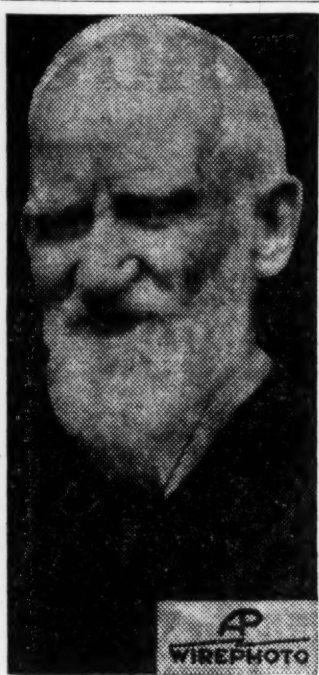

In the East Indies the Dutch are constructing a system of coastal defenses at strategic points. They are building a fleet of mosquito boats to protect their shores from an expeditionary force.

But both the British and the Dutch have no naval force of any size. In addition, I found a crying demand for more airplanes from both Dutch and British officers. Naturally, they include the United States Asiatic fleet to make for their deficiencies. It may be wishful thinking, but it exists and affects their policies of defense.

The Japanese know that the British and the Dutch have no offensive weapon of any striking power. They also know that the only offensive weapon of any power and sting is the United States Asiatic fleet based in the Philippines.

Japanese Strategy.
The Japanese war strategy is to provide as small a target as possible for the United States fleet to shoot at if war comes to the south Pacific. So the Japanese are preparing to make war on Singapore and the Dutch East Indies from Thailand, French Indo-China. They will operate overland wherever it is feasible.

The Japanese also are sending munitions and other military equipment to Thailand. Three 5,000-ton freighters have been ferrying the material to Bangkok for the last three months. Under pressure from Tokyo, Thailand has increased its army on the Thailand-Malaya border to 25 divisions. If war starts, this jungle border will be a bloody battle-

Silk-Loaded Japanese Liner Delays Docking

100 Americans Aboard Vessel Hovering Off San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 25.—(AP)—N. Y. K. Shipping Line officials announced tonight the Japanese liner Tatuta Maru, hovering off this port with a $2,500,000 cargo of silk and more than 100 Americans among her passengers, would not dock here tomorrow as previously reported.

Before the President's order freezing Japanese assets was made public the N. Y. K. office received word from the big ship she would be in at 5 a. m. The announcement gave rise to speculation that special arrangements had been made through the State Department to avoid seizure of the ship.

About 8:30 p. m. the N. Y. K. office said "some delay in the arrival of the Tatuta Maru is anticipated."

Officials said they hoped to have further information "shortly," but pointed out all authority for directing ship movements rested with the headquarters office in Tokyo.

Rites at Gainesville For Corporal Clark

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
GAINESVILLE, Ga., July 25.—

Rites were held at the Central Baptist church Wednesday for Corporal J. S. Clark Jr., 23, who died at a Monroe, La., hospital of injuries sustained in a truck crash in the near-by town of Bayville.

Dr. W. J. Jones officiated, and burial was in Alta Vista cemetery, with military honors.

Corporal Clark was on duty when the truck he was driving skidded on wet pavement and overturned. It was reported he enlisted in the Army last September. He was a native of Hall county, had previously engaged in the insurance business, and was a member of the Baptist church.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Clark Sr., and a brother, H. W. Clark, all of Gainesville.

LaGrange Gymnasium Is Being Renovated

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
LAGRANGE, Ga., July 25.—

The LaGrange High school gymnasium is undergoing extensive improvements, and will be in tip-top shape at the opening of the fall term.

The gymnasium, located back of the school building, has heretofore been a mammoth wooden structure, but is at present being brick veneered and generally improved within.

ground between the Japanese forces and their allies, and the British Imperial troops of Malaya. Also the British will have to contend with bombing raids from Japanese air bases in Thailand and Indo-China.

The net effect seems to be this: The Japanese can start the wholesale conquest of the south Pacific area. The operations cannot be halted until the Japanese have reached the first line of defenses of the British and the Dutch, unless the United States Asiatic fleet and its airplanes go into action. However, the American forces are in danger of counter-attacks from Japanese bombers and submarines. This may require maintenance of a large American force in the Philippines.

Unless the United States is prepared to throw the full strength of its Pacific fleet into offensive action against the Japanese, the first victories of a war in the south Pacific are liable to be chalked up on the score sheet for Tokyo.

Stalin's Strong Hand in Peace Seen by Shaw

Soviet Aims To Figure in New Order, Writer Says.

LONDON, July 25.—(AP)—George Bernard Shaw, who will be 85 years old tomorrow (Quote: "I am trying to die, but I simply cannot do it"), marked his birthday eve with an interview in which he said that victory in the war "will be a joint affair of Britain, the United States and the U. S. S. R."

The oracle, celebrated for his plays, his wit and his whippersnappers, declared that "as Russia is now in the front line and likely will be a decisive factor, the peace terms will not be so simple as they were at Versailles, where, although America had finished the job, France and Britain were not prevented by President Wilson from going all out for the dismemberment of Germany under cover of a League of Nations which was carefully reduced to impotence beforehand by giving every power represented on it a veto."

As if to balance that long sentence as well as explain President Wilson's position, Shaw added: "Wilson could do nothing because America was not at his back and turned him down."

Has Soviet at Back.
"But Stalin has the U. S. S. R. at his back; and the U. S. S. R., having paid the piper, will call the tune with a weight that Wilson could not bring to bear."

"And, as the United States forms a plutocratic republic and as Britain is an equally plutocratic constitutional monarchy, there will be a clash between plutocracy and Socialism."

"Stalin will have the advantage of thoroughly understanding the position whereas the plutocrats talk about Socialism and Communism and liberty and democracy without knowing what they are talking about, just following the slot of money and power as a hound follows the slot of a fox."

(Webster's New International Dictionary: "Slot (n) the track of a deer, hence, any track or trail.")

"That will be the situation," he declared, but "I can say nothing about its upshot as I am not a prophet, nor even a tipster."

Four Realms Substituted.
Asked whether he thinks the war is seriously hampering developments of the arts, particularly literature, Shaw replied, "War hampers everything except the application of science to the arts of slaughter and destruction. But it does so it produces results that are entirely unexpected and unintended."

"In the four years' (World) war I overthrew four apparently everlasting empires (German, Austro-Hungarian, Russian and Ottoman) and the present war has thrown plutocratic England and America into the arms of Communistic Russia. Not what the warmakers intended, is it?"

Shaw is passing the midsummer days at his beautiful country home in Ayot St. Lawrence, Hertfordshire, meditating in his sardonic way and occasionally contributing to the press a letter expressing his views on the aspects of the war.

Shaw plucks the fertility string a great deal. The whole idea of celebrating birthday anniversaries nauseates him and the approach of his is usually heralded by some deprecatory "crack" such as the current:

"I've lived quite long enough and I am trying to die, but I simply cannot do it. A single beefsteak would finish me, but I cannot bring myself to swallow it. I am oppressed with the dread of living forever. That is the only disadvantage of vegetarianism."

Cotton Farmers Get Stamps in Hancock

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
SPARTA, Ga., July 25.—Hancock county cotton farmers who have voluntarily cut their acreage allotment, are now receiving cotton stamps to the amount of $25 for each acre cut, with not more than $50 worth of the stamps going to any one farmer.

It was reported that over $17,000 worth of these stamps will be distributed in Hancock county during the next few weeks as the land, kept out of cultivation of cotton, is measured.

Feed crops have been planted on this land taken out of cotton. The outlook for cotton is gloomy with the highest price in years indicated for this fall's crop.

Guilty Plea Entered in Theft of Diamond

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
DUBLIN, Ga., July 25.—Marion Fitzpatrick, a Negro who sold a diamond estimated to be worth $300 to $400 for $7, yesterday pleaded to larceny from the house and was given a sentence of from one to three years by Judge R. Earl Camp, of Laurens superior court.

The ring was stolen from Mrs. Thomas Gibson, of Dublin, according to Assistant Solicitor General Emory Baldwin.

Chief of Police J. W. Robertson, who investigated the theft, tracked Fitzpatrick to Macon, and succeeded in recovering the diamond for Mrs. Gibson.

Student Sues for Right To Take Final Exams

In an effort to be graduated with other classmates at Lincoln High School in Gahanna, Ohio, Dale Main, 18, son of Merton Main, Gahanna, brought suit in county court against the township board of education.

The youth asked in his suit that the school's teachers be compelled to give him his final examinations. The youth was refused the right to take his final examinations on grounds of extended absence from school.

national defense and American interests, to prevent the liquidation in the United States of assets obtained by duress or conquest, and to curb subversive activities in the United States.

It added that "this measure, in effect, brings all financial and import and export trade transactions in which Japanese interests are involved under the control of the government, and imposes criminal penalties for violation of the order."

Technically, the order prohibited the use or removal from the United States of any Japanese or Chinese property without a specific license for each transaction from the secretary of the treasury.

Besides applying to cash, checks, drafts, gold and a long list of other assets, the order had the effect of immobilizing, for the present at least, all Japanese ships in the United States waters. Four were believed to have been caught by the order, and 40 more were reported hovering off the west coast of the United States, fearing to come into port.

It was estimated by some sources that, aside from the ships, some $131,000,000 of Japanese assets were involved, although others figured the sum was much higher. There are between 60,000 and 70,000 Japanese nationals in United States territory, it was estimated, and many of them are expected to be affected by the order.

Won't Injure Chinese.
If Japan should retaliate in kind, she might tie up some $217,000,000 of American assets within her reach.

Technically, the order applied to all Chinese assets, but it was made clear that it would be administered in such a fashion as to do no harm to the cause of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, who has been engaged in a four-year battle against Japanese invasion with the active sympathy of the United States.

In fact, the White House statement said that China was included in the order at the request of the generalissimo and "for the purpose of helping the Chinese government."

It was patent that the aim was to prevent the Japanese, by virtue of their occupation of a large portion of China, from getting possession of, or benefit from, any Chinese wealth which is within the jurisdiction of the United States government.

By treasury definition, the freezing order applied to the following:

"Money, checks, drafts, bullion, bank deposits, savings accounts, any debt, indebtedness or obligations, financial securities, commonly dealt in by bankers, brokers, and investment houses, notes, debentures, stocks, bonds, coupons, bankers' acceptances, mortgages, pledges, liens, or other rights in the nature of security, warehouse receipts, bills of lading, trust receipts, bills of sale, any other evidences of title, ownership or indebtedness, goods, wares, merchandise, chattels, stocks on hand, ships, goods on ships, real estate mortgages, vendors' sales agreements, land contracts, real estate and any interest therein, leaseholds, ground rents, options, negotiable instruments, trade acceptances, royalties, book accounts, accounts payable, judgments, patents, trade marks, copyrights, contracts or licenses affecting or involving patents, trade marks or copyrights, insurance policies, safe deposit boxes and their contents, annuities, pooling agreements, contracts of any nature whatsoever, etc."

The funds of Russia, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland, however, have been released since the general European order was issued on June 14.

Technically, the freezing procedure does not prevent use of

Ladies Face Stocking Shortage

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP)—There may be many more bare-legged women in the United States as a result of the government's action in freezing Japan's assets.

The bare facts are these: Silk comes from Japan, and it was considered possible that trade between the two countries would be hard hit because of the difficulty of making payments.

America was believed authoritative to be in the making.

Tonight's order also provided that any person in this country, American citizen or otherwise, found to be acting as an agent of a country whose funds were frozen was subject to having his own funds tied up.

The Treasury planned to make public soon regulations determining how much money Japanese in this country may have for living expenses and similar purposes. Usually, persons living in this country whose funds are frozen are allowed at least $500 a month for personal living and traveling expenses.

Soon after issuing the freezing order, the Treasury issued exemptions to 14 banks for the specific purpose of continuing trade between China and the United States, Canada, the Latin American countries, the British Empire, Russia or the Dutch East Indies.

Another Treasury order exempted "ordinary" trade between the Philippine Islands and China or Japan, but provided that the exemption could not be used to help other blocked countries.

Another group of exemptions applied to certain Hawaiian offices, including branches of some Japanese banks in Hawaii.

Half Is In Cash.
Japanese assets in this country, as far as official reports showed, consisted of approximately half cash and half securities and other investments. Besides securities in cash, the Japanese have a number of branch offices here belonging to Japanese exporting, cotton and banking firms.

The freezing order also was expected to have a severely adverse effect on a large merchandise trade between the two countries, because of the difficulty of making payments.

This trade has been declining the last year, however, as the United States has either shut off or restricted sales of scrap iron, copper, other metals, machine tools and gasoline to Japan.

Before the present war Japan was the third largest customer in the world for American merchandise. Last year's Japanese purchases here totaled $227,200,000, slightly below the average for the last 15 years. But in the first five months of this year such purchases slumped to $47,648,000, little more than half the $91,871,000 of the similar period last year.

Imports Keep Pace.
Despite export controls by this government, principal merchandise moving to Japan so far this year has been petroleum, $11,713,000; copper, $3,966,000, and power-driven metal-working machinery, $1,342,000.

American purchases from Japan last year totaled $158,376,000, which was average, and have been running near the same rate this year. However, silk is the only item upon which the United States depends from Japan. Silk accounted for $106,951,000 or approximately two-thirds of all American purchases from Japan last year.

Japan was the 31st country whose funds have been frozen by the United States. Starting in April of last year, President Roosevelt has frozen the funds of every country in continental Europe and their possessions elsewhere in the world, including French Indo-China.

The funds of Russia, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland, however, have been released since the general European order was issued on June 14.

Technically, the freezing procedure does not prevent use of to Singapore, Britain's great Far Eastern naval base, British Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies. The newspaper Molonte Indo-Chinoise at Hanoi, the colonial capital, hinted in an editorial, presumably government-inspired, that Japanese occupation of the new bases would be a step for further moves south.

"Indo-China," the paper said, "is on the way to Singapore and the Netherlands East Indies. The Formosa and Hainan (Japanese) bases being too distant for her South Seas policy, Japan required facilities in southern Indo-China."

(In Vichy, authorized circles announced that a definite agreement had been reached between Japan and France over Indo-China.)

(It was expected that technical discussions between military commanders of the two countries would continue, probably in Hanoi.)

(An authorized statement will be issued in Tokyo soon, it was said.)

Both French and Japanese authorities at Hanoi refused to discuss the agreement or to comment on the nature of conversations still going on there between Governor General Admiral Jean Decoux and General Sumita.

GYPSIES ERR ON PALM.
Four gypsies were ordered to leave Philadelphia when they pleaded guilty to larceny by trick. They admitted using a sleight-of-hand trick to take $1.95 from a man whom they charged $1.25 to read his hand. The man was a vice squad detective.

pan that a move against any of these might bring more than economic reprisals from this country.

In view of the Axis support if not inspiration of Japan's move in French Indo-China, it was said to be possible the United States might order out all Japanese consular officials as it already has done in the case of Germany and Italy.

Talks With Legates.
As a sign of close Russo-American collaboration, he indicated Russia was sending a special mission here to direct purchases of war supplies—a subject which Welles said he discussed yesterday with the Soviet Ambassador, Constantine Oumansky.

In other diplomatic conferences in the past two days, Welles said the British and Australian ministers and the Chinese ambassador.

The latter's visit to the State Department indicated the United States might be planning some new form of aid to China as one means of countering the increased Japanese threat to the Burma supply line to China (Japan's military expansion in Indo-China places her in better position to move on against the Burma supply route).

All indications were that the United States, branding the new Japanese action as a threat to American security, was now more ready than ever to demand a halt in what Welles termed a "movement of conquest" in the Pacific.

It was evident in Tokyo, too, that the Japanese were aware of this, but whether this was sufficient to deter Japan from further moves remained unanswered.

There were indications, however, that one other immediate step involving relatively small risk of conflict with great powers might be contemplated—a demand for military bases and other concessions in Thailand.

Strategic Advantage.
This would give Japan further strategic advantages, including a land gateway into the British Malayan peninsula toward Singapore and better striking points against the Burma route and forces in southeast China.

The linking of American, British and Netherlands interests in the Pacific by Welles yesterday constituted a plain warning to Ja-

Resentful Japs Are Astonished At U. S. Stand

Press Urges Japan To Prepare for Any Type Action.

TOKYO, July 25.—(AP)—Japan displayed today after the United States government's stand on the Far East, and one widely circulated newspaper called upon the Japanese to be prepared for any action the United States may take regarding the Orient.

Commenting upon President Roosevelt's statement yesterday in which he spoke in the past tense of American reasons for permitting oil shipments to Japan, the newspaper Nichi Nichi foresaw the possibility of Washington taking some concrete steps and observed:

"Of course, Japan cannot anticipate what course President Roosevelt's action will take and, therefore, she must be prepared. Hitherto the British-American strategy has been to keep Japan on the sidelines in the effort to destroy the Axis powers. It is not certain that this strategy will be followed in the future."

Antagonistic Pose.
(This comment was published prior to President Roosevelt's disclosure Friday that the United States would take specific action Saturday against Japanese moves in French Indo-China.)

(A secretary of Japanese Ambassador Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura said after the order freezing Japanese credits was issued the embassy was "not prepared" to make any official statement on President Roosevelt's action, the United Press learned.)

(He did not indicate whether a statement will be made later.)

Newspapers generally adopted a more antagonistic attitude toward both Britain and the United States. They printed arguments blaming United States and British economic activities for the disruption of Japanese economy. Although they acknowledged that this disruption was partly due to the spread of war, they tried to show that Anglo-American motives hostile to Japan had played a large part.

The government was understood to be studying closely President Roosevelt's remarks about Japan's oil supply, which were even prominently displayed on the first pages of Japanese newspapers, and Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles' statement containing blunt references to alleged Japanese aggression.

President Roosevelt's references to Indo-China were deleted from his remarks as published here, and the press carried nothing on the Welles statement, for obvious reasons.

Press Held Silent.
(The Japanese press is not yet permitted to discuss the Japanese program for military bases in Indo-China.)

Officials withheld formal comment on both statements. They said they were awaiting an official text of the Welles remarks from Ambassador Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura.

In line with the antagonistic attitude toward Britain and the United States, the authoritative Japan Times and Advertiser declared that all of French Indo-China obviously is in need of "adequate defense which will guarantee the integrity of the region."

Japan's commercial rights in Indo-China have been imperiled by the "encirclement of Indo-China by Anglo-American and Chungking interests," the paper said. The "encirclement," it asserted, was in the form of "aerial, naval and military bases extending from India and Burma around to Malaya and the Philippines."

MARRIED WITHOUT PENNY.
In Fort Worth, Texas, the nervous young man fumbled in his pockets a moment, then ruefully admitted: "Judge, I haven't got a nickel—what does it cost to get married?" Justice of the Peace Hurley grinned, agreed that in case it could be done for nothing.

New Attempt To Keep Army Home Is Seen

Isolationists Seek To Write Ban in Draft Extension Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(UP)—Senate noninterventionists will seek to write into pending legislation extending indefinitely the service of selectees, National Guardsmen and reservists a prohibition against sending them outside the Western Hemisphere, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, announced today.

Such a ban now exists in the selective service act. But noninterventionists fear that it could be circumvented through language in the War Department's draft of the extended service resolution now under consideration by Senate and House Military Affairs Committee.

Hearings ended.

The language in dispute says that "the President is empowered to employ the armed land forces of the United States in excess of those of the regular army, in the national defense."

Chairman Andrew J. May, Democrat, Kentucky, of the House Military Affairs Committee, said this could be interpreted as authorizing Mr. Roosevelt to use the trainees anywhere.

The House Military Affairs Committee concluded hearings on a similar resolution and planned to take action on Monday. It heard a warning today from Major General Milton Reckford, commander of the 29th Division at Fort Meade, Md., that the Army would be "completely disrupted" unless the service of the trainees is extended.

He said his division was composed of 60 per cent selectees and 40 per cent National Guardsmen and that it is "nowhere near ready for battle yet."

Major General Jacob L. Devers, commander of the Ninth Division at Fort Bragg, N. C., said he was training his soldiers to work together like a good football team.

If the selectees are withdrawn, he said, "we're going to lose our biggest game."

Frank Murray, South Bend, Ind., president of National Parents of Selectees, Inc., testified that he knew of one group of trainees who would "go on a slow-down strike" or "just disappear" if Congress passes the extension program.

He argued that the emergency is no worse than it was a year ago when the selective service act was passed.

"In fact the country is in less danger now because Germans are being destroyed at a faster rate than they were then," he said.

Brigadier General Lewis B. Hershey, acting selective service director, cautioned the committee against writing into the program a system of bounties to encourage voluntary enlistments.

He said history is replete with instances showing that this plan had failed to get results.

'Bombs' Strike Norfolk But No One Is Injured

NORFOLK, Va., July 25.—(AP)—If there had been any air raid shelters handy a part of Norfolk's population would have died for them today.

A 10-gauge practice bomb, which a startled passerby said "fell from the sky," exploded in the center of a street in a Negro residential section, emitting a cloud of smoke. Another dropped nearby but didn't go off.

Officials of the naval air station said they would attempt to determine if the bombs came from a Navy plane.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE?—The motorist was attempting to swing right into Alabama street from the left lane on Broad street but Traffic Officer H. R. McCurley is speedily correcting that. Officer McCurley has made hundreds of motorists back up and proceed in the proper traffic lane in the last week.

FRIENDLY TIP—The driver at the wheel of this car is getting a friendly tip from Officer H. R. Curley on one of the oldest rules of driving—the fact that it's against the law to make a left turn when you're traveling in the right traffic lane. The classroom this week has been the intersection of Broad and Alabama streets, where Officer McCurley is on duty. Starting Monday the classroom will be traffic court.

Officer Not Going To Let His Corner Be Traffic School

There's be no wool-gathering motorists crossing up the traffic lanes at Alabama and Broad streets from now on.

Traffic Officer H. R. McCurley has moved in and he's opposed to it. After a week of educating the motorists public up to two of his pet traffic regulations—(1) No left turns from safety zones; (2) No right turns from the center of the street—he is preparing to get down to the business of enforcing the law via the traffic ticket and traffic court route.

"I've been at this corner since a week ago Thursday," Officer McCurley reports, "and I've been making half of them that make turns, back up and get in the proper lane. They've been pretty good-natured about it, most of them, and I've seen fewer violations today than any day, since they gave me this corner."

Officer McCurley came to Alabama and Broad from Walton and Forsyth, where, he said, he long ago educated his drivers "up to watching the lanes." He hasn't issued traffic tickets, which usually cost the violators around $3

Two New Cases Of Polio Are Reported Here

City's Total Boosted to 65; 230 in State Stricken.

Two new cases of infantile paralysis were reported in the southeastern section of Atlanta yesterday, bringing the city's total number of victims to 65 and the total for Georgia to 230, health officials reported.

Seven new cases were reported in other sections of the state, but none of these were in the rural section of Fulton county or DeKalb, where the totals remain 17.

Among the 54 Georgia counties where the disease has struck are Gwinnett, with 15 cases; Crisp, with eight; and Upson with seven. Physicians described most of the cases as mild, but pointed out they had a tendency to spread over a large area.

Dr. J. F. Hackney, assistant city health officer, said only seven new cases were reported in Atlanta since Saturday, and he regarded this as "quite favorable."

"The epidemic seems to be dropping off," he said.

In Atlanta, the Sunday school of the Episcopal Church of the Resurrection was ordered recessed today until September 7 as a precautionary measure.

The Decatur swimming pool also was closed yesterday for the duration of the epidemic.

Returning Consuls' Sailing Is Delayed

LISBON, July 25.—(AP)—Delay in clearing luggage through customs today forced postponement until 6 p. m. tomorrow of the sailing of the Naval transport West Point to New York with 400 United States consular officials and other American citizens from Germany, Italy and occupied territory.

The vessel originally had been scheduled to sail tonight and the first of the passengers went on board shortly after 9 a. m.

New assignments from the State Department sent 28 of the consular officials to posts in England, Ireland, Africa and Spain.

Regents Regret Ouster Action, Hunter Claims

'All But Three' Are Now Penitent, Savannah Member Says.

E. Ormonde Hunter, of Savannah, member of the State Board of Regents, believes "all but three" of the prosecutors in the recent trial of Dr. Walter D. Cocking and Dr. Marvin Pittman will admit they were wrong in dismissing the two state educators.

In a statement, Regent Hunter named Governor Talmadge as "one of the three from whom I do not expect such a retraction."

He added that "one of the others is a man who, after attempting to vote these professors into oblivion, callously and casually admitted to me and others that he did not believe a word of the charges had been proven."

Hunter said "already one of the 10 has come to me displaying the deepest emotion, saying that he would give a lot to have voted with the losing five."

The Savannah regent was one of the five who voted to re-employ Dr. Cocking and Dr. Pittman. Ten voted against re-employment.

Researcher Here To Study Polio Spread

Doctor Albert B. Sabin Seeks To Learn How Virus Is Carried.

Doctor Albert B. Sabin arrived in Atlanta by plane from Cincinnati yesterday afternoon to conduct field research on poliomyelitis, on behalf of the Children's Hospital Research Foundation at the University of Cincinnati, working with the aid of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

He is the first of a number of research men expected here from other polio research organizations.

He will confer with Doctor James F. Hackney, assistant city health officer, and state health officers. Doctor Hackney said last night he welcomed polio research men to the city.

Like other medical men, Doctor Sabin is concentrating on learning how the disease spreads, a problem he has been studying 10 years.

"The virus is definitely eliminated from the body," said the doctor. "The question is how it spreads to others. Naturally, the question of flies arises. They spread other diseases, but cannot be yet charged with carrying poliomyelitis."

The doctor said that the disease may well be spread by children suffering from a form of the disease so mild that it does not prevent them from continuing their normal activities.

For example, he said, a child may have a slight nausea and fever at night and by morning feel no further ill effects of polio, although still able to transmit the germ to playmates.

Doctor Sabin will request permission of city and state authorities to collect samples which he will forward to his laboratory in Cincinnati, where they will be tested through injection into monkeys.

Now associate professor of the Pediatrics at the University of Cincinnati, Doctor Sabin was until two years ago with the Rockefeller Institute in New York. He is a graduate of New York University.

Roosevelt Speech Copyists Jailed

ROME, July 25.—(AP)—Seven persons convicted of copying and distributing speeches by President Roosevelt, United States Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and Prime Minister Churchill were sentenced today to prison terms ranging from three to 12 years by a special tribunal from which there can be no appeal.

They were accused also, in one instance, of having altered a Roosevelt speech so that it was "offensive to the Italian government."

The defense argued that the speeches already had been published all over the world—including in the Italian press.

German News Agency Must Pay $1,000 Fine

Transocean Found Guilty of Failure To Register as Agent.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP)—Deliberating only 33 minutes, a federal district court jury late today found Transocean, German news agency, guilty of failing to register under the foreign agents' act.

The jury had heard a federal prosecutor argue that Transocean was not a legitimate news agency, but "a propaganda arm of the Nazi government."

Judge T. Whitfield Davidson fined the corporation the maximum, $1,000, and denied a motion for a new trial.

In his closing argument, George McNulty, assistant to the attorney general, told jurors the agency "gathered the news—the material—for propaganda against the United States for use in countries abroad."

McNulty declared Transocean worked co-operatively with the German embassy in Washington and acted "as the confidential political agent for the German foreign office and the propaganda ministry."

Yost Appointed To Sell Metal, Aiding Defense

Proceeds From Aluminum Sale Will Go To U. S. Treasury.

(Picture on Page 1)

J. Y. Yost, state procurement officer of the United States Treasury, has been designated to sell to a government-approved smelter all aluminum collected in Georgia in the current national defense aluminum drive.

Lieutenant Colonel Richard C. Job, executive director of the Georgia Defense Council, announced yesterday.

Atlanta, Savannah, Macon, Columbus and Valdosta have been selected as concentration points in Georgia from which aluminum will be shipped to the smelters.

Coffee pots, cans, griddles and other articles will go directly into parts for planes, tanks and military equipment.

Treasury procurement officials will have direct charge of assaying and weighing the metal donated. Proceeds from the sale will be deposited in a special account of the United States Treasury.

Zinc, copper, scrap iron and other metals that may be included in parts of the aluminum articles donated by the public also will be purchased by smelters and proceeds deposited in the Treasury.

Colonel Job emphasized that payment will be made at maximum prices for scrap aluminum set by the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply. He emphasized that no individual, group or corporation will make any profit out of the donated aluminum.

The Atlanta Advertising Club is handling publicity for the campaign.

Tonn, United States managers for the agency, were indicted jointly with the corporation. Both men escaped trial, however, when they were exchanged, under State Department orders, for two American newsmen held in Germany.

Beauty Parlor Riot Followed By Floggings

Alabama Prison Warden Quits After Whipping Women.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 25.—(P)—The flogging of five white women convicts as punishment for a beauty parlor riot was revealed today by Governor Frank M. Dixon, who said J. Curtis Weldon Sr. had resigned as warden at Wetumpka State prison as an aftermath.

"We just don't use those methods in our prisons," Dixon said, but added he had not asked for Weldon's resignation and described the whole affair as "a closed incident."

The executive insisted also that the women were not injured by their seven lashes apiece, administered, he said, by Weldon following a free-for-all fight that developed when an inmate was denied a manicure Saturday in the newly installed beauty shop that was designed "to improve morale" as well as teach a trade.

Nothing had been made public on the incident until newsmen questioned Dixon today. Colonel W. E. Persons, chief of corrections and institutions, and his employees refused to discuss the matter and referred all questions to the Governor. Pictures were refused.

The Governor said permission of the department of corrections and institutions was not asked before the whippings were administered, and pointed out that while prisoner floggings were permitted under Alabama law, regulations required that a permit be obtained from the department, that a physician examine the prisoner to determine whether their health would be impaired, and punishment be administered in the presence of a physician.

Garbage Walkout Affects LeCraw

Roy LeCraw, Atlanta's mayor, is suffering from the strike of 178 Negro garbage collectors, even as you and I.

Out at his home, 99 Twenty-sixth street, N. E., he has to step over a dead dog, which lies in the street close to the LeCraw habitat, undisturbed by city garbage collectors.

The mayor said influence is on a "blackout at a time like this and we'll struggle along like everybody else."

The Governor said permission of the department of corrections and institutions was not asked before the whippings were administered, and pointed out that while prisoner floggings were permitted under Alabama law, regulations required that a permit be obtained from the department, that a physician examine the prisoner to determine whether their health would be impaired, and punishment be administered in the presence of a physician.

Roosevelt Voices Disapproval of Senator Wheeler's Actions

Stimson disclosed that the senator had sent postage-free postcards to some Army men asking that they write to the President expressing their opposition to American entry into the war. This, said the cabinet officer, was close to the line of subversive activity, if not treason itself.

To this, Wheeler replied that Stimson was in his "second childhood" and "ga-ga." And today the senator contended that Mr. Roosevelt and his secretary of war were conducting a "smear campaign" against himself and Charles A. Lindbergh.

The point stressed by administration men is that long-standing Army regulations forbid soldiers to engage in any activities intended to influence legislation.

Committee Agrees

The question was raised earlier in the week by General George C. Marshall, the Army chief of staff, who charged that outside interests were endeavoring to have draftees actively oppose pending legislation to make their term of active service indefinite instead of terminating at the end of 12 months.

Today members of the Senate Military Committee were reported to have agreed informally on a resolution which would declare a limited emergency and thus permit the President to hold draftees, National Guardsmen and reserves in service.

homa, a committee member, said the resolution also would permit the government to hold members of the regular Army in service beyond their three-year enlistment period. He predicted, however, that the measure would not lift present prohibitions on sending selectees, guardsmen and reserves outside the Western Hemisphere.

At hearings before the House Military Committee, Major General Milton A. Reckord testified that 90 per cent of the men and all the officers of the 29th Division, which he commands, favored the extended period of service.

"Frankly," he said, "I think the need exists."

Nation in Peril

The nation was in great peril, in his opinion, and the best course was a declaration of emergency by congress.

"Don't tie the hands of the War Department in this situation," he said, adding that people should "stop writing foolish letters" on the issue.

Indiana, put in a word for Wheeler on the subject, asserting that Stimson had been "wholly unfair," and adding:

Hopkins Reports

"While we all may not agree with Senator Wheeler's views on foreign policy, none should doubt his sincerity, his integrity or his patriotism."

In addition to his comments on the Wheeler postcards, Mr. Roosevelt at today's press conference said he had word from Harry L. Hopkins, in England, that the lend-lease program was going all right.

Hopkins, as co-ordinator for the program, is consulting various British officials and departments on the problems of American aid.

The President also said that the Office of Production Management and the Price Control Administration have the same objective in the proposed curtailment of automobile production. Both want a gradual switch to the production of war goods, he explained, but the price control office favors a more rapid pace in making the transition than OPM. The disagreement will be worked out shortly, he added.

An Old Japanese Custom

The Japanese, faced with a situation which he construes as disgrace, commits suicide by the ancient and painful, though dramatic, method of hara-kiri. It is quite within the realm of possibility that the latest aggressive moves by Japan may be of the nature of national hara-kiri, a suicide move which they prefer, to salvage what national "honor" they can, to the looming defeat by the Chinese alone.

For two years the Japanese have been able to wage war, in these mechanized days, solely because of the oil they have bought from the United States. According to President Roosevelt, this oil supply will, it is indicated, be now cut off because of the Japanese moves against French Indo-China. Without that oil the Japanese cannot operate a war for long.

When they take over ports and airfields in Indo-China they face the strength of the British, of the Dutch East Indies and, quite probably, of the United States Pacific fleet. True, this country still clings to its policy of nominal neutrality but, if the Philippines are endangered, as they undoubtedly are by Japanese moves to the south, there can be little doubt our Navy would receive orders to shoot. In fact it would not be out of line with some past incidents of history if the Navy shot first and received authorization afterwards.

Japan is a nation singularly susceptible to modern attack. Her industrial plants are, chiefly, concentrated in a few small areas, where bombers would wreak quick havoc in event of raids. Her civilian population lives in filthy homes of bamboo and paper. One incendiary bomb could destroy an entire city.

The Japanese navy is no match for the combined forces of Britain, of the United States and of the Dutch, now in eastern waters. Military experts agree that the naval power of the Japanese could be blasted from the waters within six months of the outbreak of hostilities. And, without naval power, Japan, an island kingdom, is helpless.

One aircraft carrier, stationed near the Japanese coast, could work terrible havoc with the cities and industries of Japan. But, regardless of this, if her oil supply from America is cut off, if she is kept from the oil resources of the East Indies, her days as an aggressor are numbered.

As for the sorry part played by the puppets of Vichy in the whole affair, the free world can only weep for the degradation into which poor France has been led by these traitor leaders. The role of France in Syria was bad enough. Her role in Indo-China is even more pitiful.

Let's not make the airplane "foolproof." We tried that with everything else, and always underestimated the fools.

George Lyman Kittredge

When George Lyman Kittredge, late chairman of English at Harvard University, died at the age of 81 this week, the nation lost not alone one of its most profound scholars but one of its most colorful educators as well. "Kitty," whose vast and deep knowledge of every subject was a matter of fearful awe to two generations of students, lived in no ivory tower of academic research. Though his Shakespearean studies made him, together with Baskerville of Chicago, America's most distinguished Shakespearean scholar, until the day of his retirement he insisted on teaching sophomores rather than to restrict himself to more advanced students.

Perfection was for "Kitty" a passion. His legendary sternness, with ignorance, of however minute a portion, endowed his students with a bitter hate while they studied under him and an almost fanatic devotion once the course was complete. "Kitty" did not hesitate to dictate notes in Latin, Greek, or any modern tongue, assuming that a Harvard student must know these languages, and red became the face of an offender who timorously requested a translation.

In a university which produced more prominent professors of English and more successful English scholars than any other in America, Kitty never took more than a bachelor's degree. Fabled in his reply to the inquiry as to why, on the basis of his many books, he did not take a Ph. D. degree. "Who," he asked, "in the world could give me an oral examination?" And the truth of it is that perhaps no living man but Professor Chambers, of Cambridge, could have tackled that responsibility.

The thousands of men prominent in American university life that Kitty gave inspiration and learning will mourn his passing as that of an immortal. His examination, largely two, five, or ten-line quotations from any of the thirty-seven plays, have set a model all over the country. His devotion to learning for its own sake, his kindness to oral examinees, his unswerving sternness in the face of abuse and ignorance have given strength and substance to American education. Great was his stature and great it shall remain.

For the Nazi fighting hero, the top award is the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross, with oak leaves and swords in diamonds. Only an ingrate will ask if the diamonds are ersatz.

Free the President

There are serious portents of American naval and military involvements in the immediate future which may tax the strength of available forces. The very fact that these portents exist should call for an immediate cessation of petty bickering in Washington and the granting of an absolutely free hand to the commander-in-chief and his chiefs of the armed services.

In the four corners of the globe there exist situations which may at any moment demand action of the sternest kind.

A Russian collapse—unexpected in the immediate future but nevertheless not to be ruled out—would turn the full fury of the Nazi assault back to England. How long England could stand alone is problematic. England is the main consideration, yet more immediate threats exist.

It may be that this country will be involved in three directions at the same time. It is not impossible that action will be necessary to keep open the supply lines to Iceland, to maintain troops in South America and to thwart Japan in the Far East. This will tax American resources to the utmost.

The burden will fall to the Navy, which is ready. It has been in fighting trim for some time. But, it does have limitations, and will continue to have limitations until the two-ocean Navy is a reality. Part of its striking force—the Marines—is in large part tied up in Iceland because a short-sighted congress ignored the lessons of American history and continues to ignore them.

America has its hands tied today by its own congress. It is a sad spectacle when a handful of spiteful men can so confuse the issue that the nation faces the immediacy of grave danger in three directions almost unable to counter in one direction. Congress must immediately free the President to take whatever action is necessary to preserve the safety of the country. If that action means war, then congress must be prepared to vote that war, distasteful though it is to all thinking men.

In Iceland, water is piped in from natural hot springs to keep homes and apartments warm, and there is nothing a janitor can do about it.

Wonder if the Fuehrer ever thought of putting a gilt edge on nonaggression pacts and selling them to gullible rustics.

In its new dilemma, slippery Janan brings to mind the unemployed contortionist, telling a New York welfare agency he didn't know which way to turn.

As peace becomes harder to locate, they may change that Nobel prize to a reward.

Georgia Editors Say:

PAVE THESE ROADS.
(From The Bartow Herald.)

Two of the most urgent road projects in this section, stopped since the beginning of the Talmadge administration although grading had already been completed on one and begun on the other, are the Rockmart road via Taylorville and the Dallas road to the Bartow county line.

Although paving has been completed of the Dallas road to the county line for well over a year, no further work has been done towards paving the six miles in Bartow county in over a year. This is the only unpaved stretch of road on a direct and shortest route leading from Fort Benning to Knoxville and other points throughout the East. Since Fort Benning is the south's leading military center, from which troops may have to be dispatched in a hurry some day, it is important that this piece of paving be completed. It is, mind you, the only unpaved six miles of road on the whole route from Benning to Knoxville and other points east.

The Taylorville-Rockmart road is of equal importance to this section. It would provide a route through some of north Georgia's leading industrial and agricultural centers. It is badly needed. We understood that money had been appropriated for the project, and know that it was begun under the previous administration with considerable grading already having been done. The right of way is all clear and nothing should now stand in the way of work going forward. It was, we understand, part of the state's WPA road assistance program.

The grading of this road should not be delayed any longer. And following its grading, it should be paved as quickly as possible.

There is also no excuse for the Highway Department not completing the paving of the Dallas-Cartersville road at the earliest opportunity.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

NATIONAL INTERESTS IMPERILED
July 25.—As a commander-in-chief and chief of staff, respectively, of the nation's armed forces, President Roosevelt and General Marshall have informed congress that the country is faced with a situation in which its national interests are imperiled unless the Selective Service Act is amended to permit keeping draftees and National Guardsmen in the service longer than one year.

Congress itself has voted upwards of $40,000,000,000 for national defense in recognition of this same situation created by war developments abroad. The Selective Service Act was designed to implement this huge defense expenditure.

Considering the past action of congress, on the one hand, and the present recommendation of the President and chief of staff, on the other, it is inconceivable that any question should be raised about the matter.

Congress has certainly certified the President's appraisal of the danger to us that lies in the international situation. If the nation is faced with this sort of peril, it obviously would be in far greater peril if two-thirds of the Army (selectees and National Guardsmen) were sent home within the next few months and a lot of raw, untrained troops substituted for them. The only possible issue that could be raised is whether or not the nation is faced with a situation wherein its interests are imperiled.

Once raised, the question is presented: Who is better fitted to decide the issue, congress or the commander-in-chief and the chief of staff? Put in another way, it might be: Who should congress listen to in deciding the issue?

SAMPLE OF TESTIMONY Judging from the recent testimony before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, which has the selective service bill under consideration, congress is showing a disposition to pay as much attention to crackpots and pacifists as it is the commander-in-chief and the chief of staff. The amazing part about it is that representatives of either group should be allowed even to take up the time of the committee in discussing the measure.

Here are some of the examples of this sort of testimony taken over the past few days:

The Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, of Louisiana, K. K. K. fame, now a Detroit radio speaker, proposed that a minimum wage of $100 a month be paid the selectees after their year's time is up.

Benjamin C. Marsh, of the people's lobby, proposed that prevailing wages be paid the conscripts, with the rates doubled for their second year and trebled for the third.

Paul O. Peters, representing no one in particular from St. Louis, objected to the administration plan because, he said, it was apparent the Army did not have enough weapons to equip the men under training.

Frederick J. Libby, of the National Council for the Prevention of War, was against it because, he said, it congress declared an emergency to keep the soldiers in service, the last barrier to participation in "war all over the world" would be eliminated.

SENATOR TAFT'S PROPOSAL Not quite as ridiculous, though almost as bad, was another proposal by Senator Taft, of Ohio, that a maximum period of 16 months be fixed for the men.

Why congress should see the necessity of going beyond the statement of the President is a bit confusing. Here is what Mr. Roosevelt, the commander-in-chief, said in his special message to congress on the subject:

"I feel it is imperative that I should officially report to the congress what the congress undoubtedly knows that the international situation is not less grave, but is far more grave than it was a year ago. It is so grave, in my opinion, and in the opinion of all who are conversant with the facts, that the Army should be maintained in effective strength and without diminution of its effective numbers in a complete state of readiness. Small as it is in comparison with other armies, it should not suffer any form of disorganization or disintegration."

Against this straightforward statement from the chief executive, Senator Wheeler, leader of the opposition, as usual contends that the selectees should be allowed to consider first their own desires. He is accused even of agitating within the ranks of the service for defeat of the President's recommendation.

It will be a sad day for the country in the present emergency when congress ceases to heed the advice of the commander-in-chief and sets the Wheelers, Gerald Smiths and Libbys up as greater military authorities than the chief of staff.

The Pulse of the Public

The Constitution invites expression of opinion by its readers. This column is open for that purpose. All communications must be signed and all are subject to editing for conservation of space. Brevity makes argument effective and impels attention.

TIME FOR UNITY

Editor Constitution: The entire nation has focused its attention on the educational "shakeup" in our state. The recent meeting of the Board of Regents and the expulsion of two of the state's greatest educators has aroused considerable wrath among all of the "far-visioned" citizens of Georgia.

The United States government is now strongly protesting against the use of subversive tactics in regards to our national defense, and is deporting all persons convicted of such activities. If our state should employ similar methods, presently we would have a carload of such persons shipped out of our state.

To use such an issue as "racial equality" to "railroad" a person out of a position due to a political promise too easily shows the depth of mentality of those in power. Ever since the War Between the States every living human being knows that the south has solved its own race problems; and now to inject such an issue into politics is preposterous.

I am of the opinion that since every true American, regardless of race, color or creed, is accelerating all efforts in order to protect democracy, this is no time to stir intraparty dissension. If our no commonwealth shall ever prosper unless a great degree of intelligence exists among its people, and satisfactory educational facilities are present. A person is either educated, partially educated or uneducated. Be the person of any race, white or black, an illiterate person is dangerous and undesirable.

It is time for all American to dismiss from their minds all trivial thoughts that are base and corrupt, and unite under God's guidance, especially in this great crisis. We all live or die as Americans.

I would also like to congratulate The Atlanta Constitution for its fearless stand in giving its readers the true facts, regardless of whom it might offend.

BELIEVES GOVERNOR IS RIGHT

Editor Constitution: As a "furriner" born as I was in Virginia, may I say a word in behalf of that apparent "underdog" of the hour, Governor Eugene Talmadge? I say "underdog" advisedly, since apparently it is becoming the sport of politicians, domestic and foreign, to utter diatribes against him as a dictator, a Hitler, a veritable "devil incarnate" on account of his activity in the recent removal of two professors from the University System.

There has been growing tendency in recent years a tendency to regard with indifference the basic principles of our southern civilization. Whether this growing indifference has resulted from the recent influx into Georgia from other parts of the country of thousands who hold different views or from our acceptance of foreign financial help for our schools, roads and other public facilities, has contributed to this.

BAD ADVERTISING FOR GEORGIA

Editor Constitution: It is some Board of Regents we have in Georgia now! They cannot even use good English in a carefully prepared resolution which they adopt to whitewash themselves of all political stain. Probably they had their eyes on their politics more than their English. But still you would expect the regents of a great university to be able to use ordinary good English.

But maybe you ought not to expect this of "trained seals."

Some advertisement Georgia is getting before the rest of the nation!

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Brain Picking
NEW YORK, July 25. John S. Knight, who runs the Detroit Free Press and other papers, rebukes the author of these dispatches for "as narrow a column of six-inches thinking as we have read in many a day," the same being a rather ill-written essay on the subject of American nationalism and the naturalization of aliens. He describes as "bitter words" the suggestion that if citizenship were restricted to the native, then, in time, "we should at least be able to conduct an American country by and for Americans only."

Mr. Knight seems to have done this on one of his golfing days, for he didn't put much thought or effort into his lead editorial, preferring, instead, frankly to crib his arguments from a well-known document by Will Irwin. We call this brain-picking in our trade. However, they are good arguments and Mr. Knight have toiled long and done much worse.

But, on another page of the same issue of his paper, Mr. Knight naively presents some communications which refute his own contention. For these letters include one from the president of the Junior Union and League of Rumanian Societies, another from the president of the central committee, representing more than 100 Polish societies, and the third from the secretary-treasurer of the Czech-American National Alliance.

Foreign-Born Protest

The comment of the spokesman for the Polish societies is typical of them all. He says it is now proposed to take away from the foreign-born their equality and freedom of worship and speech merely because they were born abroad.

Before proceedings, I should like to point out that no such proposal was made. There was no suggestion that freedom of worship should be curtailed or that equality under the law be thrown out of balance in favor of the native except, only, that the right to vote and hold office be restricted to them alone.

But that response is the gist of all reactions to the merest suggestion that the native be favored in his own land over persons from abroad who becoming naturalized but continue to regard themselves as Rumanians, Poles and Czechs, for example.

With not the slightest bitterness I call attention to the fact that two of these communications come from representatives of organizations calling themselves Rumanian and Polish and the third from the spokesman of a group whose own title admits that it is not wholly American. It is a Czech-American group and the Czech immigrants, after their own tragic experience with the Sudeten-German-Czechoslovakians, should be the last to assert their Czechishness in another country of which they are citizens.

As for the Rumanians and Poles who, by their titles, plainly regard themselves as Rumanians and Poles, they may be said without bitterness but, I think, with dignity, that it is impudent of them to claim a voice in the affairs of the United States. This is not Rumania or Poland, but the United States of America.

For What Purpose?

What purposes do these societies serve which have alien titles but are composed of immigrants enjoying the rights of American citizenship except to segregate their members from the rest of the country and retard their assimilation?

Their very purpose is to preserve a culture and customs which are not those of the United States and thus not only to alienate the immigrant from the native but to set foreign blocs against one another, according to ancient enmities, and to confuse the political decisions of the country. And how does anyone arrive at the belief that it is a bad thing to run the United States by the will of a homogenous electorate?

Yet the slightest suggestion that the native may be assumed to be more American than the naturalized immigrant is met by the scornful retort that no real American could entertain a thought so hostile and, as may here be seen, this withering answer comes from organizations which frankly proclaim not to be American or to be, at best, only somewhat so.

But it is hateful to say that Rumanians and Poles are not Americans? Americans do not hate Rumanians or Poles or Czechs, the Irish or the English as such. But the American has a just complaint when persons holding themselves to be foreigners in whole or in part claim the rights of American citizenship, including the right to office here.

It is said that mention of this subject tends to create disunity, but on that point I want to know who is then guilty of the disunity? The natives are and want to be all American as, of course, many naturalized citizens do, too. But any country which must fear disunity from foreign groups plainly isn't unified anywhere and should consider steps to mend the error of its way.

Word Stories

By W. Worthington Wells

INARTICULATE. Inarticulate is a five-syllable word, in-ar-tic-u-late, with the primary accent on the third syllable (tic) which is pronounced the same as (tick) in ticket. A secondary accent is on the first syllable (in) the same as that in inate. The other syllables are pronounced as written. Inarticulate is a word that requires distinct enunciation of every syllable.

Frauk Kent, the famous Washington correspondent, wrote in a recent dispatch: "Usually these New Deal literary sharpshooters have found their targets more or less inarticulate and defenseless." A severe throat infection rendered the lad inarticulate.

Stage fright causes many to become inarticulate.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL

DEFENSE NEWS From a source in Detroit, visited recently on a defense plant tour, I get word about two new developments—an anti-aircraft gun for special use against dive bombers and a 90-millimeter anti-aircraft gun which is expected to be the finest yet seen.

We not yet are in production on them but will be by September. The gun for use against dive bombers is said to be most effective. It will be placed on all our ships and will be supplied troops.

Little is being said about it, but our inventors are doing an excellent job.

One reason why we are late going into production on certain types of guns and tanks is that designs radically have been changed because of developments in Europe.

Our military observers in Europe have come home on almost every other clipper and every other one of the Export Line's ships, bringing news of the fact that some weapon, accepted for years, has become obsolete.

Our problem is made the more difficult because our position is that we must have all type weapons. Some of the weapons obsolete in European wars still are fitted for our needs in the event of certain possibilities in this hemisphere.

We are not committed to a policy of sitting down on our shores and waiting until the enemy has landed on them to start shooting, as Senator Wheeler and his group would have us do. So, we have to have weapons to fight those developed in Europe.

New weapons will be coming off the designing boards every month. This country, for instance, has a development in a flame-thrower exceeding anything yet shown in Europe. Most of the developments are secret but one may rest assured this country is going to have weapons.

PRODUCTION AHEAD This country hasn't yet realized how tremendously we are involved in defense production and in building for plants not yet producing. The recent appeal to the railroads for 100,000 of their own skilled workers is but an indication. There are literally dozens of factories yet to open their doors for workers which will need thousands of skilled mechanics.

In at least two cities, St. Louis and Baltimore, new airplane factories are to open which will need a thousand trained men each. At present they have lined up about 50. In addition to the trained men hundreds of semi-skilled men, or men skilled in one phase of work on one job, will be required.

Schools training workers no longer have time to train the complete mechanic or craftsman. They train men to do one job and to do that well. Thus, he may do one small part of the job of turning out a propeller or may know how to operate one tool which does one part of the cutting job on one of the 7,000-odd parts in one airplane engine.

There is a great amount of hand work in all airplane production. The machines of today can do 10 jobs where the machines of 10 and 20 years ago could do one. Still, the hand craftsman remains an integral part of almost any of the highly important defense factories where planes, engines and propellers are produced.

We really haven't begun to get into production as yet. It will be January 1 before the flood begins to pour out from the plants, some of which are incomplete. There will be, on January 1, many other plants still being built. We are just beginning to spend for production.

CONSUMER GOODS This presents the problem which has our financial and economic leaders in a state of quivers.

As the thousands and thousands of men are taken out of our year-to-year plants which produce consumer goods for the greatest consumer nation in the world, it is inevitable that there will be, in some fields at least, a shortage of consumer goods for the workers to buy with the increased income they are receiving.

That is why congress is buzzing with all sorts of theories. There are plans to put a ceiling on prices. If this is done, they insist there should be a ceiling on wages. There are other theories and other plans. No one plan has been agreed on, not even partially. Leaders in business and government do not want us to get into a period such as led us to 1929. That is why there is such an earnest drive on to have us buy defense bonds. If the people buy the bonds, and they are not thrown into the ordinary financial streams, the sounder will be our position.

Here again we have an indication of why we need unity. A dictator could straighten out the whole problem in a short time. He could say, as Germany did, to restrict foods, restrict wages, increase hours, restrict clothing, center everything on war.

We must go ahead the slow, inefficient way, but the way which, in the end, is less expensive in so far as our rights are concerned. We cannot afford to pay that price. We need to think in terms of national force and unity, to have a common-sense, sane attitude toward all problems.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

My Dear Louise:

I believe you can make plans for late summer and early fall without danger of having them disrupted by war.

The prophet always sticks his neck out, especially in times like these when events occur without warning; but in this instance there is every prospect of continued peace, for the simple reason that you can't make an omelet without eggs and you don't try if nobody wants an omelet.

Hitler has his hands full in Russia, and it will take him some time to finish that job and get organized for another. Moreover, he doesn't start a fight, with or without excuse, until he can gain something by it.

The Japs, who are frankly opportunists on the make, may attack their ancient enemy Russia before you see this; but they desire no war with America and aren't likely to start one unless their leaders go completely mad.

That leaves it up to us; and our leaders in Washington, whatever their faults, won't start a fight until we get something to fight with. War requires a united and enthusiastic people, and ours are badly divided. Millions of them, not realizing what we are up against, are even indifferent about defense. Others, fooled by enemy agents, actually side with those who would enslave us.

War requires enormous production of weapons, and we simply haven't got them. After a year of dawdling, shilly-shally, almost criminal waste of time, we aren't producing one-fourth as much as Germany.

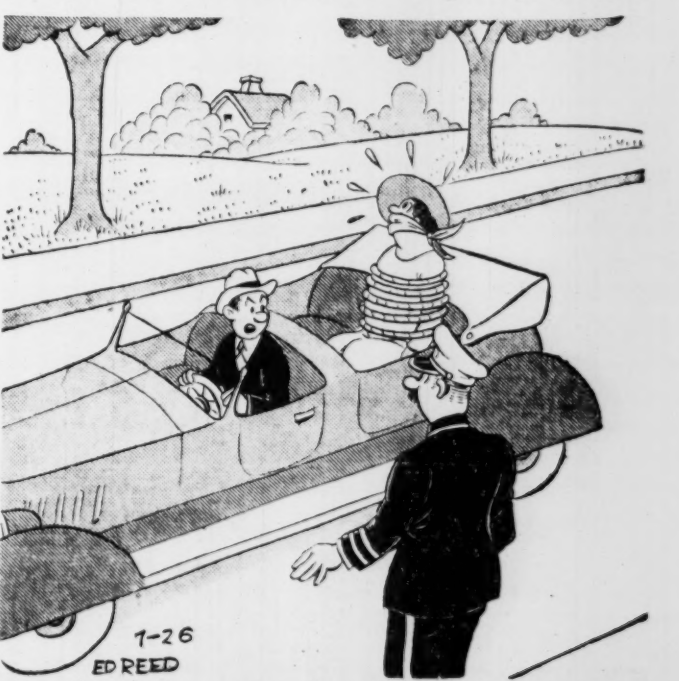

Our leaders have failed us, and are still hiding their failure behind a screen of big promises. We haven't produced a single medium tank, and our heavy tanks are still in unfinished blueprints. We aren't equipped to produce enough ammunition. We have only a few dozen modern guns to stop tanks and bombers. Our Army isn't trained. In fact, we haven't anything except a wonderful Navy. Everything else is a tangle, and Mr. Roosevelt won't give anybody power to straighten it out.

I hear that Mr. Baruch is using his great influence to delay shooting until we are prepared. And I don't believe anybody will invite shooting while we are so helpless.

Love,

DAD.

OFF THE RECORD—By Ed Reed

ED REED

Dudley Glass

Nothing wastes more words and space than a discussion of traffic problems and parking.

But because it affects so many folk—including editorial writers and columnists—the writers just can't lay off of it. If all the paragraphs I've written on the topic were laid end to end and then rolled into neat bundles they'd start all next winter's cheerful open fires and leave a bit for stuffing the chimney next spring. When they'd serve their first useful purpose.

Just now I have been reading about the problem of a small county seat town. I know the town. It's not metropolitan, but it has two blocks of stores, a courthouse, a couple of drugstores with soda fountains where a boy meets girl along in the cool of the evening, the usual Greek restaurant and enough filling stations—you'd think—to supply gas to a tank corps.

I've driven through it on mornings and afternoons when hardly anybody was in sight except the chief of police, on guard against invaders, and the fleetest pointer in front of the postoffice.

But that town has its parking problem.

On Saturdays. Country folk come to town on Saturdays. They come early and stay late. In shiny touring cars and dilapidated finks and held together with haywire. They come to buy things from the merchants. The stores extend for two blocks—and you can't park many cars in two blocks.

So the newspaper in this town, like a number I've read, makes an impassioned plea for more parking space—on Saturdays.

Room for Buyers.

It urges the merchants and their clerks and the doctors and lawyers and the town barber and all the town folk to leave their cars at home on Saturdays or park them in some remote spot to leave space for buying visitors. But it doesn't seem to get any results. Fellow wants his car handy, so he can hop in it and go look at somebody's crop and get a line on his credit. And he doesn't want to walk home to midday dinner in the hot sun.

Atlanta is by no means a country town, even if it isn't as big as New York. You wouldn't think it a "Saturday" town.

But did you ever notice how congested the streets are around Saturday noon?

Lots of the traffic jam is caused by home folk—office workers, calling in a day's driving home. But merchants and parking lot managers tell me Saturday is a big day in Atlanta because of the country folk coming into town. Maybe it's habit. Maybe it's the only day the head of the family can break away.

You don't notice them because they look just like Atlanta folk. There is no hayseed in their hair and they don't chew straws. You might spot them by the number of children in the cars. But the thousands of earloads are absorbed into the city traffic.

Maybe it would be a good idea if most of us left our cars at home on Saturdays and rode a trolley or bus. In fact, that might be a good idea on Mondays and Wednesdays and all the other week-

Saturday Problem In County Towns—And Perhaps Here.

It would most certainly help solve the gasoline restriction problem. And save us money and temper.

'Youth' Orchestra.

Atlanta's new National Youth Orchestra, sponsored by the Youth Administration and directed by Enrico Leide, is all set for its debut—the new Lawson General hospital near Chamblee, which has just received its first soldier patients. I hope I can get out there.

I had a call the other day by Ellis Williams, musical supervisor of the youth movement, and Miss Jeanette Johnson, a former grand opera contralto and chairman of the entertainment programs. They were enthusiastic about the orchestra—42 young folk who had hardly known the feel of a fiddle bow or cold metal of a trombone mouthpiece until Leide started in on them.

This Leide, I have thought for years, is a wonder. He may not be quite a Toscanini or a Stokowski—though he might have been if he'd had the musicians to conduct who watched the batons of those celebrities. But Leide—as he has proved—can round up a bunch of good, standard musicians—many of whom must work at some other trade between engagements—and get more music out of them after two rehearsals than Toscanini could. At least, that's my opinion. And Eugenia Bridges Harty, who heard the Youth Orchestra a few evenings ago, says he's doing wonders with those boys and girls.

I had to start an argument, of course, with Supervisor Williams. "I see you're playing Beethoven and Humperdinck on your Lawson hospital program," I observed, nastily. "Don't you know they were Germans. Don't you think that's unsavory, even subversive or watch-alike?"

Mr. Williams smiled patiently. "Beethoven and Humperdinck and Wagner are long dead," he said. "They never heard of Hitler or the Nazi idea. You like Italian opera, don't you? Verdi and Puccini and the rest? Well, they all died, too, before Mussolini was heard of. You like the French music, don't you? Gounod's 'Faust,' for instance. Gounod passed on long before France surrendered to the Nazi invaders. But his music is just as beautiful as when it was written."

"You and I see alike," I remarked. "Music and literature are something outside of world politics. If you take away the German and Italian and French and Russian—I'd forgotten for a moment that Russia is on 'our side' now—we wouldn't have much left beside McDowell's piano compositions and John Philip Sousa and Irving Berlin and Tin Pan Alley. Little great music come out of England."

"I'm not worrying about our losing foreign music, unless we all go crazy. I merely hope some fervently patriotic organization of stay-at-homes and whoop-em-ups don't insist on interning dogs of German ancestry. My dechshund, Ding, is only two years old and can't speak a word of German. Or understand it. I doubt he'd be a Nazi. Because he hates sterminess and brutality and loves affection from everybody he meets. He wouldn't fit into the Nazi picture."

Georgia Towns Fight Proposal To Drop Trains

Hearing Brings Protests Against Move by Southern.

Representatives from numerous Georgia communities yesterday entered vigorous protests to the proposed discontinuance of Southern Railway trains between Macon and Brunswick and Atlanta and Columbus at a hearing before the Georgia Public Service Commission. Chairman Walter R. McDonald said the commission would announce its decision late Monday.

The Southern Railroad sought to suspend operation of the trains during the national emergency in order to release equipment which railway officials said was vitally needed elsewhere in the transportation of troops.

R. B. Pegram, vice president of the railroad, asked that the commission authorize suspension of trains Nos. 24 and 25 between Atlanta and Columbus.

Representative L. A. Whipple, of Cochran, revived the legislative pipe line fight at the hearing by asserting:

"I would have far more faith in the burning desire of the railroads to serve the government in this national emergency if they had shown an equal desire when the government asked for the construction of pipe lines in Georgia."

Delegations from Eastman, Helena, McRae, Hazlehurst, Baxley, Jesup, Brunswick and other communities along the route told the commission that suspension of the two trains between Macon and Brunswick would take away the only train service for some communities and work a hardship on all.

Delegations from Warm Springs, Concord, Columbus and the flag stop of Reedsboro protested the discontinuance of service between Atlanta and Columbus.

Mayor W. G. Harry, of Warm Springs, emphasized suspension would bring about a great inconvenience in the transportation of patients to the Warm Springs Foundation.

Proposal Put on House Wheat Measure by Committee.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP)—The administration's rigid marketing control program for wheat, carrying with it a 49-cent-a-bushel penalty sharply criticized by some growers, will come up for a new vote of confidence by farmers.

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard announced today that the program, established this year for the first time with the approval of 81 per cent of wheat growers voting in a recent referendum, would be continued for the 1942 crop, subject to a new referendum next spring. Approval by at least two-thirds of the farmers voting is necessary.

Wickard's action to continue the AAA control system came as a Senate Agriculture Committee approved legislation which would prohibit the Agriculture Department from selling government-owned cotton until after the war is over.

With cotton prices advancing to highest levels in more than 10 years and some officials feeling that they might continue to artificially high levels, the department has been considering plans for release on the open market of cotton the government has acquired as a result of its loans to growers. The committee attached to a

Pioneer Group Swaps Memories at Annual Luncheon.

Twenty boys played hookey at 12:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon when they got together in Rich's tearoom for the annual meeting of the Pioneer Schoolboys.

Led by the president, McWhorter Milner, a comparative upstart who squeaked in under the wire when the school attendance requirement for membership was raised from 1872 to 1910, the boys brought back the old days when coaxing was done with a switch or a good rap on the knuckles and the three R's did not suggest the initials of a government agency.

The Pioneer Schoolboys first met in 1910 in the unfinished Healey building with Bill Healey presiding.

After luncheon, which was also attended by five of the girls whose books several of the boys used to carry home from school, tales of momentous events inside, outside and around the little red school house were swapped, ending with everyone went home with memories shining bright until the meeting next year when they will be taken out and polished again.

DeKalb Group To Entertain Flying Cadets

90 Trainees From Camp Gordon To Attend Dinner, Dance.

Ninety flying cadets from the Camp Gordon Naval Air Base will be guests of the DeKalb Chamber of Agriculture and Commerce at a chicken dinner followed by a dance beginning at 7 o'clock tonight in the Decatur Woman's Club.

Ninety young ladies from all over DeKalb county will be "dates" of the trainees for the evening. The couples will be introduced at the door when the men arrive from Camp Gordon.

Decatur theaters announced also they will provide free tickets for any couple choosing to attend a movie rather than dance.

The chicken dinner will be prepared by members of the Decatur Woman's Club under the direction of Mrs. A. B. Lee, president.

The newly organized Volunteer Defense Service group, composed of some 40 girls in DeKalb who are taking first aid training classes, will lend its services in the job of entertaining the men. Jane Stillwell is temporary chairman and Mary Gresham and Olive Howard are members of the organization committee.

The man who wants to fix your place up advertises in the "Business Service" classification in the Want Ads of The Constitution.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

INSPIRED BY GOD.

Sunday's lesson, passages from Galatians. First Timothy. Second Peter. Second Timothy. Second Peter. and Jude, teach us how the Holy Spirit inspired New Testament writers, and, indeed, all the writers of the Old and New Testaments. The golden text: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for instruction, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." (Second Timothy 3:16.)

One of the cherished statements of our fathers concerning the inspiration of the Bible is here quoted:

"We believe that the Holy Bible was written by men divinely inspired, and is a perfect treasure of heavenly instruction; that it has God for its author, salvation for its end, and truth, without any mixture of error, for its matter; that it reveals the principles by which God will judge us, and therefore is, and will remain to the end of the world, the true center of Christian union, and the supreme standard by which all human conduct, creeds, and religious opinions should be tried."

One of the best definitions of inspiration is found in the writings of the late Dr. Edwin C. Dargan: "Inspiration is the action of the Holy Spirit upon the minds of the writers of the Scriptures whereby their thought and language express the mind and will of God."

Dr. Augustus H. Strong put it this way: "By the inspiration of the Scriptures, we mean that special Divine influence upon the minds of the Scripture writers in virtue of which their productions, apart from errors of transcription, and when rightly interpreted, together constitute an infallible and sufficient rule of faith and practice."

The subject or theme of the Old and New Testaments is the Divine plan of redemption. Jesus Christ is both the subject and end of the Scriptures.

Jesus, in His brief earthly ministry, was constantly quoting the Old Testament. He knew the letter of the Scriptures and He knew the meaning of the Scriptures. He did not come to destroy the law and prophets, but to fulfill them.

Whenever I hear anyone questioning the authority or the adequacy of the Scriptures, I am certain right then of one thing—that person does not acknowledge the lordship of Jesus. He may be ever so versed in philosophy and science and psychology and all the

Group Organizes Port Committee

CHARLESTON, S. C., July 25.—(AP)—H. A. Manning, of Columbia, was named chairman of the South Atlantic Ports Emergency Committee at its organization meeting here today.

Representatives from Savannah and Brunswick, Charleston, Wilmington, N. C.; Jacksonville, Fla., and interior points were present. Each port will organize a port committee, to be represented by its chairman on the emergency group.

The emergency committee will formulate a program concerning relations between ports and the national emergency.

North Carolina Man Named on Farm Board

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP)—The appointment of Claude T. Hall, of Roxboro, N. C., to the board of directors of the Farm Credit Administration of Columbia, S. C., was announced today by the Agriculture Department.

The board supervises activities of the Federal Land Bank of Columbia, the Federal Land Bank of Columbia, the Columbia Bank of Co-operatives and the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Columbia.

These credit units serve North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

Helen Morgan To Wed In Characteristic Pose

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., July 25.—(AP)—Helen Morgan, who won fame and fortune singing the blues from atop a night club piano, will be married Sunday afternoon to Lloyd Johnson, wealthy Los Angeles automobile dealer.

The wedding will take place at the Dempsey Vanderbilt hotel. Miss Morgan will sit in her characteristic pose on a piano top for the ceremony.

After a brief wedding trip, she will continue as an entertainer for a time before they settle in Los Angeles or Miami Beach.

"I HAVE SOMETHING FOR YOU"

Kirk Asks Kit To Marry Him at Once; In Her Happiness, Kit Pities Tracy

By Margaret Gorman Nichols
Author of "I'll Wait for You" and
"Kiss After Midnight."

INSTALLMENT XXII.

Kit said breathlessly, "I'd love to but I can't. Tracy may want me. She doesn't know I'm out. She's much better. Have you noticed? She's—she's different. She's beginning to realize that people she never considered before have something to give her and that she has something to give them other than her wages."

"You like her now don't you?"

"Someday, and it isn't going to be long, she's going to be the sort of person all the right people will admire. She has it in her. She just hasn't let it come out. She thought, 'I'm making Tracy grand for him, but I'm not being a martyr. It's true and she deserves his kind of praise.'"

For a while they didn't say anything. Then he said, "Yes, I'm going back home. First, I'll turn the survey in Baltimore and then go down to southern Maryland and to see my folks. They have a grand old place—horses and dogs. It isn't nearly so pretentious as the places around here but it isn't a place you open at only certain seasons of the year. It's open all the year. It's home. They have a lot of things and they grow a lot of things they need. I've never seen more beautiful country."

She thought, "Why is he telling me this? Just because we can't talk in silence or because he loves his parents and their old home so much that he wants to talk about them? Maybe he's homesick."

She said, "I sounds grand. I'm afraid I'll have to turn back now. It'll be mine someday, that place," he said as they turned into the road. "My brother and sister have settled elsewhere."

"But you are living in Baltimore now, aren't you?"

"Yes, but I'm going to learn to fly when I get back. I'd like to have a small plane so that I can get to the country for weekends and also to fly up to the little cabin. I have in the Pennsylvania mountains. It isn't much to look at, that cabin, mostly fireplaces. I go up there on weekends to ski."

"I went to a place in Maryland last winter to ski. But mostly I tell down."

They didn't say anything more until they had almost reached the house.

Then quietly Kirk asked, "Do you wonder why I'm telling you this, Kit?"

She stopped. Still she didn't look up. She didn't dare. . . .

"Why, yes," she said. "I did wonder. I thought possibly you were homesick. It's perfectly natural to want to talk about your home and family and the things you like to do."

"That's not why I told you. . . ."

When she looked up, his arms were around her. He didn't kiss her then. He just held her and said in the voice that had never been so close before, "I told you to go back with me. Oh, Kit, what happened? Why did we get so tangled up? I don't care about the people who say you can't fall in love at first sight. There's something about the matter with them. I did—with you. But it got awfully mixed up somewhere. Why do you suppose I came over here so often? To see you, hoping to see you. I'm not one of Tracy's crowd. I couldn't be. I'm not big-time enough. I like her and we've been neighbors. But—you're my girl, Kit. You're my girl, darling. You're—you're my wife. . . ."

"I want to be. Oh, I want to be. . . ."

He kissed her twice, once fiercely, once gently. So close to him she knew that he was trembling, too.

"It could have been settled that night in New York, Kit. I was sure then, sure of that than of anything I've ever known. I can't explain it. I just knew. . . ."

You said 'I want a well-rounded life. That's what I've always said. And I knew you'd fit in with the country house, with the horses and dogs, and in the mountain lodge and in the city apartment and with the flying lessons—everything. It seems I've been loving you and wanting you a long time, Kit. It was settled with me from the beginning. . . . And I've had to wait three months to tell you but I'm not going to wait three more months to marry you. I don't believe in long engagements, Kit. . . ."

"I want to stay here close to you like this. It was the same with me, Kirk, the very same. I feel so much—I can't say anything. . . ."

She wanted to laugh and to cry at the same time. It was real. . . . This was Kirk's dear face close to hers. . . . She was so polite and shy. . . . I didn't know. I couldn't guess. . . .

"I couldn't propose to you before other people. I had begun to think I'd have to. But I wasn't leaving without you. Oh, Kit, nothing can beat us. We're a team! You're so lovely and I've wanted so long to touch you. . . ."

He kissed her again, a light, happy kiss. "I'm going to wire my family. You'd better wire Aunt Chris. We're getting married. No delays, no nonsense. I'm not going to love you from a distance any more. You—you wouldn't elope with me tonight, would you?"

"I would if I could stop thinking about your family and Aunt Chris—they wouldn't like it. They would be disappointed. Oh, Kirk, I love you so. I'm so terribly happy. . . ."

But all at once her face changed. And Tracy—I can't leave her now. For a few shining moments she had forgotten how Tracy felt about Kirk, that Tracy depended on her, that Tracy had no one else, and that though they had not put it into words, they were friends now. You don't leave a friend when she's sick and needs you. And Tracy cared for Kirk.

She had said "Not Death but Love. . . ."

Kirk said, "She can find someone else to take your place, Kit. There are a lot of good people looking for jobs."

"Yes," she said faintly against his shoulder. He didn't understand and she couldn't tell him. It wouldn't be fair to tell him how Tracy felt about him. Looking up, she said, "Please, please be patient. We won't get tangled up again. We can't—after this. But give me a little time. She's getting better. She's learning about her diet and the insulin treatment and soon she won't need anyone. She'll probably want to close the house and go south, Kirk. I can't tell her now. I can't have her go back to being cross and bitter. . . ."

"You're sweet. All right. We won't tell anybody if you want it that way. But when I leave, you're coming with me, Kit. We'll pick up Aunt Chris in Washington and be married down on the farm. He smiled. "You see, it's fixed, Kit."

Kit thought, "I wish it were as simple as that. He doesn't know Tracy. He doesn't know what happened today between Tony and Anita. He's thinking about us and that's the way it should be."

She smiled up at him, her face warm and radiant. "We're as good as married."

Kirk said, "I love you. You're my wife. When am I going to see you again? If I come here, I'll have to be polite to you and nothing else. Can't we meet in town and have dinner next week? Monday? Today is Saturday and I can't wait any longer than Monday, Kit."

"I can't wait that long either, but I must. . . ."

"I'll go in early and get a ring. You have to have an engagement ring. We're going to be a conventional, conservative couple."

Kit's eyes were shining. She laughed. "It's—it's too much. I—I can't take it all in. . . ."

He kissed her again. "You can take this, can't you? We're going to be happy, Kit."

"We're going to be terribly happy. . . ."

"I suppose I'll have to let you go now. Good night, Kit, my darling. Remember, it's fixed, you and I to a ripe old age. You and I. . . ."

"Each to the other. . . ."

Quickly she walked towards the house but twice she stopped to look back. He was on walking down the road. Each time he was standing still, his hands in the pockets of his dark coat.

The house received her, Tracy's house, and a friendly one now. Kit felt happiness overflowing in her and the same humility Mike had felt when he sold his story. It was a kind of sacred humility that makes you bow your head and give thanks for his wonderful thing that has happened to you. Kirk and she, each for the other, all the tangles gone. Kirk, no longer half a stranger she loved, but someone close and vital and possessive. . . .

Going to her room, she walked to the window and stood still and straight, her thick lashes bushing away the foolish, happy tears. In the pictures in her mind of all the years to come, the sharing and the giving of their love, their constant closeness. She and Kirk living in the old Maryland home, in Baltimore, in the Pennsylvania mountains. She, Kit, with a ring on her finger, Kirk's wife. He had called her that tonight. She smiled tenderly.

Should she write Aunt Chris at once? No, not tonight. It was late and tonight was for Kirk and her alone. She thought, "But all the tangles aren't gone. I know that. They won't be gone until Tracy knows. How innocent Kirk is. He doesn't know how she feels about him. I like him for his modesty and innocence. He doesn't think that every girl who looks at him twice wants him."

She felt helpless. If only she could go to Tracy's room tomorrow morning and say, "Kirk and I are going to be married, Tracy." hear Tracy wish them happiness and then hurry with Kirk to get a train for Washington and then on to the farm in Maryland where they would be married. But she couldn't do that. Friendship and admiration had mixed with loyalty and she could not do that to Tracy—yet. Better to deceive her for a time, than to tell her that Kirk did not want her and never had.

She went to bed to sleep fitfully. She awoke with the telephone ringing in her ear.

Kirk asked, "Kit?"

"Yes!" And it was all new and wonderful again. "Yes, darling. He chuckled. "You sound sleepy. Did you sleep? I didn't. He went on, his voice deep and steady with a vein of little-boy happiness in it. "When I woke up, Kit, I wanted to see you, to hold you in my arms again."

Kit said, the happy, foolish tears again in her eyes. "Sometimes what happened the night before isn't real the next day. This is real."

"It's the real thing we've ever known, Kit. I wish we could tell everybody."

"Not yet."

"Your way. All right. I won't be over there today. Tomorrow night at seven in New York, Kit. I'll have to make myself wait until then."

When Kit went to Tracy's room, Tracy yawned and smiled. Kit felt guilty. How could she and Kirk have a fine, happy beginning with Tracy between them? What a curious turn of the wheel that gave her what Tracy Field wanted! A little girl who had been raised by a working woman and another little girl born an heiress both wanted the same man.

Tracy said, "You work seven days a week, Kit. It's a fine day for knitting. Look how much I did last night."

"You'll finish your sweater first."

"That's what I intended to do, darling."

"But I don't knit on Sunday, Tracy."

"You don't? Why?"

"Because it's Sunday."

Tracy smiled. "All right. I won't either. Next thing I'll be going to church. Anita came in to see me a little while ago. She's feeling very sorry for herself. She's like some proud, fine, female animal walking around wounded. Poor Tony! I'm afraid they'll never get together again."

When the phone beside the chaise longue rang, Tracy picked it up. "Hello. . . . This is Tracy. Hello, Sara. I'm very much better, thanks. I've missed you and Bill around this summer but I've been doing what I could for your house guest. . . . I don't do much. Just sit around, but I'd like to come. . . . I'd like to see new faces. See you then. . . . Good-bye."

She turned to Kit. "That was Sara Lanhana. She and Bill are back and they want me to come over this afternoon."

She looked thoughtful as she bit into her lower lip. "I haven't been off the place since I came out of the hospital. Weeks I've been here. Funny, the longer I stay, the less I mind. Some people would call it getting into a rut. It isn't that at all. It's warm to be here. He said if I were intelligent about my illness, no one would ever know. We'll go into New York one day next week, Kit, and I'll buy some new clothes."

She smiled a puzzled smile at Kit as she ran her fingers through her hair. "I can't understand myself. I want to do things now, buy clothes, go to the theaters, see people. But I don't want to lose something new I've found. I'm afraid it will pass as the other stimulating things I've found have passed. Contentment can be stimulating, I've discovered. And I want to hold onto that if I have to let everything else go. How I talk to you, Kit. You can always hire yourself out as a listener."

And Kit was thinking, "I'm not going to hire myself out any more, Tracy. I'm going to be his wife. And you will see him this afternoon and go on hoping. . . ."

Later she helped Tracy dress. "I haven't been out for so long."

Tracy said as Kit walked beside her down the steps, "that I'll probably say the wrong things to Sara's guests. Maybe I'll giggle and blush. It's been said over and over and you've heard it a thousand times, Kit, but it always bears repeating, that you don't appreciate things until they are taken from you. There's another thing, too. It's appreciation of people around you. Take Cecil, for instance. I didn't know until recently that he fought in the last war and that out of his salary he supports his mother and a sister in a sanatorium."

"And look at the flowers on the place. Mack was telling me the loving care that goes into making flowers beautiful. Many people walk around blind who really aren't blind."

When she was in the car, she said to Kit, who was standing beside it, "I won't eat anything, Mama, and I won't drink, and I'll count the cigarettes."

She looked thoughtful as she bit into her lower lip. "I haven't been off the place since I came out of the hospital. Weeks I've been here. Funny, the longer I stay, the less I mind. Some people would call it getting into a rut. It isn't that at all. It's warm to be here. He said if I were intelligent about my illness, no one would ever know. We'll go into New York one day next week, Kit, and I'll buy some new clothes."

She smiled a puzzled smile at Kit as she ran her fingers through her hair. "I can't understand myself. I want to do things now, buy clothes, go to the theaters, see people. But I don't want to lose something new I've found. I'm afraid it will pass as the other stimulating things I've found have passed. Contentment can be stimulating, I've discovered. And I want to hold onto that if I have to let everything else go. How I talk to you, Kit. You can always hire yourself out as a listener."

And Kit was thinking, "I'm not going to hire myself out any more, Tracy. I'm going to be his wife. And you will see him this afternoon and go on hoping. . . ."

Later she helped Tracy dress. "I haven't been out for so long."

Tracy said as Kit walked beside her down the steps, "that I'll probably say the wrong things to Sara's guests. Maybe I'll giggle and blush. It's been said over and over and you've heard it a thousand times, Kit, but it always bears repeating, that you don't appreciate things until they are taken from you. There's another thing, too. It's appreciation of people around you. Take Cecil, for instance. I didn't know until recently that he fought in the last war and that out of his salary he supports his mother and a sister in a sanatorium."

"And look at the flowers on the place. Mack was telling me the loving care that goes into making flowers beautiful. Many people walk around blind who really aren't blind."

When she was in the car, she said to Kit, who was standing beside it, "I won't eat anything, Mama, and I won't drink, and I'll count the cigarettes."

for knitting. Look how much I did last night."

"You'll finish your sweater first."

"That's what I intended to do, darling."

"But I don't knit on Sunday, Tracy."

"You don't? Why?"

"Because it's Sunday."

Tracy smiled. "All right. I won't either. Next thing I'll be going to church. Anita came in to see me a little while ago. She's feeling very sorry for herself. She's like some proud, fine, female animal walking around wounded. Poor Tony! I'm afraid they'll never get together again."

When the phone beside the chaise longue rang, Tracy picked it up. "Hello. . . . This is Tracy. Hello, Sara. I'm very much better, thanks. I've missed you and Bill around this summer but I've been doing what I could for your house guest. . . . I don't do much. Just sit around, but I'd like to come. . . . I'd like to see new faces. See you then. . . . Good-bye."

She turned to Kit. "That was Sara Lanhana. She and Bill are back and they want me to come over this afternoon."

RAF Fighter Tells of Battle On Air Today

The spectacular story of one of Britain's gallant air fighters, from pacifist beginnings to a fiery plunge from the skies, will be unfolded by an unidentified RAF flight lieutenant in a series of four exclusive NBC-Red network broadcasts. The first is to be heard today at 4:45 o'clock over WSB.

Wounded Pilot To Re-late How Plane Came Down in Flames.

The narrator is to tell his own crowded story from peaceful Oxford student days to the hospital cot that marked the end of combat days in Britain's Spitfires and Hurricanes. Now physically unfit for combat duty, he is attached to a British Air Commission in the United States.

This RAF pilot's story parallels that of many a young Briton who helped beat back swarms of invading Nazis in the perilous days after Dunkirk. Blasted out of the air into a fiery tailspin, he considers his escape and subsequent recovery a miracle.

"Christmas" in July will be a musical anachronism presented by Hans Kandler when he conducts the Polonaise from Rimsky-Korsakoff's opera, "Christmas Eve," during his second guest appearance with the NBC Summer Symphony, tonight from 8:30 to 9 o'clock over the NBC-Blue network and WAGA.

Kandler will open the concert with his own orchestral arrangement of an organ Toccata by Frescobaldi, celebrated organist and founding in order will be "Suite" by Rhapsody No. 2, by Georges Enesco, Ent'acte music from the ballet "Rosamunde" by Schubert, and finally, the "Christmas Eve" selection.

Jack and Linda, "Chronicle" reporter, sent to cover a four-alarm tenement fire, discover arson and beat the police in finding the culprit on "City Desk," over Columbia network and WGST tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

Death toll in the gutted tenement block is 23. Gil Nolte, city editor, learns the buildings were owned by a well-known philanthropist instead of a bank, as had been supposed. Linda beats both Nolte and Jack in solving the case.

Representative Walter C. Ploeser, Republican, Missouri, speaks on the St. Lawrence Seaway project over the Columbia network and WGST tonight at 8:15 o'clock. The congressman is heard on Columbia's "Public Affairs" program from Washington, opposing the project.

The St. Lawrence Seaway would open the Great Lakes to deep water navigation, make a seaport of Chicago and furnish millions of kilowatt hours of electrical energy. The seaway is a joint project of the United States and Canada.

James Burnham, assistant professor of philosophy at New York University, explains his theory that managers make up the new ruling class of the world when he discusses his much-talked-about book, "Managerial Revolution," with Dr. Alpha Smith on Columbia network's "On Men and Books" today. WGST will handle locally at 1:30 o'clock.

This is the book which was published last April 10 without arousing much interest. Then, suddenly, about May 15, its sale skyrocketed, and now it is in the best-seller class.

"My Dixie Girl," a ballad written by Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, will be sung on Mutual's "Chicagoand Concert" tonight at 9:05 o'clock over WATL. It is expected that Cooper will be in the studio to hear tenor Attilio Baggio sing it.

A melody of Franz Lehár tunes and a roundup of "radio favorites" like "Alice Blue Gown," "I Love Louise," and "When Day Is Done" will keep soprano Marion Claire, Bob Trendler's chorus and Henry Weber's WGN orchestra busy.

Other selections: "Rush Rhapsody" by Herbert Russell; "The Nightingale" by Cielito Lindo by Fernandez; "Love's Own Sweet Song" by Kalman. (Marion Claire, Attilio Baggio).

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Astrologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21 and April 19 (ARIES)—New affairs started today will have a tendency to be carried out systematically, aggressively and diplomatically. The day favors dealings with people who are responsible and trustworthy, and you should make steady progress in matters that concern your personal welfare.

April 20 and May 20 (TAURUS)—This should be a very favorable day for ideas that start and finish now. Optimism or overconfidence for the future should be curbed, and if these traits are held in reserve, the day favors domestic, financial affairs, sociability and mechanical interests.

May 21 and June 20 (GEMINI)—This morning and until 11:01 a. m. brings influences which tend to irritability, haste, a desire for quick changes, which lead to discord and sudden losses. High tension fills the air, and calmness in all things should be your goal. Be especially careful of accidents during the entire day.

June 21 and July 22 (CANCER)—The combined influences today supply inspiration that is favorable for financial interests, making personal decisions, contacting superiors as well as general business activities. The best aspects of the day operate previous to 3 p. m.

July 23 and August 22 (LEO)—Previous to 2:43 p. m. favors social associations and work catering to this side of life. Financial efforts should meet with favorable results. After 2:43 p. m. favors attention to routine matters.

August 23 and September 22 (VIRGO)—Previous to noon favors dealings with those in advanced or superior

New Methods Raise Safety For Convoys

Observer Describes De- struction of Nazi Air Attacker.

The following dispatch by a United Press staff correspondent traveling in a British convoy was brought back to England by an escorting warship which left the convoy in mid-Atlantic to return to its base. The convoy is still at sea.

WITH AN ATLANTIC CONVOY, July 20.—(Delayed)—(UP) Navy men are predicting that a decisive British victory in the battle of the Atlantic is now in sight because of secret new methods for protecting convoys, and in this 1,000-mile trip through extremely dangerous waters I have seen reason for their confidence.

Only once has the convoy been attacked. A big four-engined German bomber zoomed down on us, met a hail of anti-aircraft fire and plunged into the sea. There were no survivors.

Bomber Smashed.
The shells that smashed the bomber were fired from the merchant ships in the convoy, former American Coast Guard cutters, an old American destroyer and other escort vessels.

Hardly a day passed when we were not shadowed by long-range German bombers which sweep far out over the Atlantic from Norway and France to report convoy movements to waiting submarines lurking in the shipping lanes for an opportunity to strike.

Not once has a submarine attacked us, although we know from reports that many U-boats have been nearby. The corvettes, destroyers and sloops "screening" the convoy have dropped scores of depth charges.

Details of the new methods, which more than anything else have been responsible for turning the tables in the battle to keep Britain's lifeline open, naturally are kept a deep secret.

Protective Kites.
One new protective device is the old childhood toy, a kite. The big kites are flown from mastsheads of the merchant ships to fend off dive bombers, just as barrage balloons do on land. The kites are much cheaper and more practical at sea because they do not slow down a ship so much.

Inter-communication between ships in the convoy has been speeded by radio telephone, which allows the commanding officer to give instructions to all ships simultaneously. "RT" is particularly useful in emergencies, when ordinary flags and signal lamps are slow and confusing, and it cannot be heard by submarines and planes more than a few miles away.

None of these tricks of convoy defense was in use when I last rode a convoy six months ago. When the bomber approached to attack our convoy a few days ago we knew its exact position and distance when it was some distance away and hidden by clouds. Every gun station was manned and kites were flying by the time the plane came into sight.

Cautious Approach.
The big bomber circled cautiously above the long line of ships. The American cutters and other escort vessels drew in close from their screening positions to bring maximum fire power to bear. A few scattered shots were fired, but the bomber stayed out of range.

Then it emerged from the clouds and roared into a dive until it almost scraped the masts tops of the freighters.

For 10 seconds the convoy's gun blazed. Machine guns spat all around us. Two-pound pom-pom guns made a rhythmic coughing noise as they poured out 90 shells per minute. Tracer bullets screamed into the bomber's fuselage.

A stick of bombs fell from the plane, but before they hit the water the bomber's left wing fell off and tumbled lazily into the sea. A bright red glow lit the cockpit, then the huge plane turned in a slow half circle and plunged into the ocean between two ships, narrowly missing a corvette.

The convoy plodded on. The only damage was a slight fire near the bridge of a freighter.

Mrs. Penson, 90, Succumbs in Hall

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. GAINESVILLE, Ga., July 25.—Services for Mrs. Margaret Penson, 90, one of Hall county's pioneer women, who died at her home at Murrayville Wednesday, were held this afternoon at the Cool Springs Baptist church. The Rev. J. H. Peck and the Rev. B. F. Blackburn officiated, and burial was in the churchyard.

She was a native of Hall county, and had made her home here practically all her life, and had been a member of the Baptist church more than 75 years. Mrs. Penson leaves 80 descendants, including four sons, O. L. Penson, of Smyrna; C. E. Penson, of Chocoma; J. L. Penson, of Chamblee; T. R. Penson, of Dawsonville; two daughters, Mrs. C. A. Elliott, of Murrayville; Mrs. B. B. Maxwell, of Gainesville; 30 grandchildren; 40 great-grandchildren, and four great-great-grandchildren.

Bibb Jurors Suggests Purge of Voters' List

MACON, Ga., July 25.—(P)—The Bibb county grand jury has suggested that the board of registrars purge the voters' roster of persons known to be dead.

Citing names of persons who would be 125 years old now if alive, the grand jurors commented: "We seriously doubt the existence of such persons, but we believe that a lot of these people, in some mysterious way, manage to vote."

MILITARY POSE—Lieutenant Jetton King Jr., of the Quartermaster Corps, is one of the first officers in the Fourth Corps Area's 30,000 to have his picture snapped in the new program to photograph every officer in the Army for identification purposes. While Lieutenant King poses in Atlanta quartermaster depot, Private E. G. Tibbils mans the camera controls and Private W. C. Brinson stands by.

Waycross Gets Ready To Hold Tobacco Sales

Gold Leaf Jamboree To Be Held Friday, August 8.

By LISTON ELKINS.

WAYCROSS, Ga., July 25.—(P) The Waycross tobacco market, ready for its seventeenth season of annual auctions, will blend sound business tactics with the usual color when the 1941 sales season begins Tuesday, August 5. Warehouse operators have everything in readiness and the Waycross central tobacco committee, with E. Kontz Bennett as general chairman, has completed other plans in connection with the opening. The Junior Chamber of Commerce will join in the welcome of tobacco growers with a Gold Leaf jamboree August 8.

While the tobacco marketing season has lost much of its hilarity and flamboyancy in favor of orderly selling and systematic movement of leaf from the curing barns and pack houses to the warehouse floors, there is still considerable color attached to the auctions and inevitably there is an accompanying rise of spirits as the soft gold leaves are converted into silver.

Three warehouses are operated here, the Waycross house by Bethel Reynolds, and Farmers by L. C. Pruitt and the Georgia by R. M. Williams and G. F. Atkins. The official figures of the Georgia Department of Agriculture reveal that in the past five years Waycross has led the state in average price on one occasion, ranked second in another season, and third in still another.

The Waycross market draws from a rich agricultural region in south Georgia. Just now growers are busy with the 24-hour-a-day job of preparing their leaf for market as rapidly as it ripens in the fields.

GRADERS TO VISIT BROOKS COUNTY

QUITMAN, Ga., July 25.—An official tobacco grader will spend next week in Brooks county giving demonstrations on grading tobacco and assisting farmers in the proper preparation of their leaf for market.

On Monday demonstrations will be held at the L. M. Griffin farm, on the Moultrie road, and the H. D. Jordan farm at Rock Hill. On Tuesday demonstrations will be held at the J. A. Milton farm at Nankin and the H. G. McGiboney farm at Hickory Head. On Wednesday the grader will give demonstrations at the J. B. Hall farm at Dixie and the J. L. McCoy farm on the old Quitman and Morven road.

Revenue Collections Are High at Rome

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. ROME, Ga., July 25.—Auditor's reports of the city finances for the first half of the current year show revenue collections at much above the normal rate.

The report states that revenues have already been determined to the extent of $92,966 per cent of the anticipated amount for the whole year.

Business license collections through June 30 were $427.30 above the total expected for 1941 with a total of $45,927.30. Also payments for water meters and connections have netted $149.30 more than was figured for the year.

Walton Health Unit Given High Praise

MONROE, Ga., July 25.—(P)—Three South American medical students, attending Johns Hopkins University through Rockefeller fellowships, said this week that Walton county's health department compared favorably with any of those they have studied. The students are traveling through various sections of the United States studying public health methods.

Two Stores Burn At West Point

WEST POINT, Ga., July 25.—(P)—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed two stores in downtown West Point today, burning for nearly three hours before being checked.

Morris Darden, manager of Darden Brothers' Shoe store, said his stock was a complete loss and estimated damage to building and stock at $35,000. A. M. French, manager of Kessler's store in the adjoining building, said his stock was completely destroyed but declined to estimate dollar loss.

Dial Telephone System Installed at Quitman

QUITMAN, Ga., July 25.—The Southeastern Telephone Company began this week cutting over to the new dial system and work should be completed the latter part of next week. It is believed the new dial system will be most satisfactory and the conversion will improve and facilitate service.

New directories are being printed this week and when the installation is completed company officials are planning to hold open house, inviting all citizens to visit their new building and see the new equipment.

Board To Supervise Renting in Moultrie

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. MOULTRIE, Ga., July 25.—Major Y. L. Taylor, commandant of the Moultrie Advance Flying school, said today a military board would be set up here to supervise the renting of houses, apartments and rooms to those connected with the airbase.

"We cannot have the military personnel bidding against each other," the commandant said, adding that it had been found by the Army unless some form of control is adopted "rents often run beyond reason and officers bid against each other for the most desirable places."

Photographers 'Shoot' 30,000 Corps Officers

Huge Identification Project of Army Gets Under Way.

There will be no cases of mistaken identity among the officers of Uncle Sam's Army when Army photographers get through with the assignment they have just undertaken.

They are taking a picture of every officer in the Army, the untouchable, unflattering but appallingly accurate passport kind, for use in an identification booklet which the officer will carry on his person at all times.

The booklet, similar to the kind in use during the first World War, will carry the officer's picture, rank and a brief description of him.

Photographers set up their equipment and started taking the first of approximately 30,000 pictures to be snapped in the Fourth Corps Area alone, at the quartermaster depot yesterday. Forty-four officers were photographed there and the photographers will move on until they have covered every post, camp and depot in the country.

Officials at the depot said the pictures would be useful in checking the papers of officers when they arrive from another post to take charge of arms, men or materials.

R. A. Behm Honors Daughter, Fiance

Climaxing the series of pre-nuptial parties that have been given for Miss Charlotte Behm and William Thigpen Jr., whose marriage takes place today, was the dinner given last evening by the bride-elect's father, R. A. Behm.

The affair, which followed the rehearsal for the couple's wedding, was held at the Henry Grady hotel. The attractive table decorations featured the bridal motif.

Guests included the members of the bridal party and out-of-town guests.

Mrs. Reitzel Weds Louis J. Nichols

The marriage of Mrs. Elsa Reitzel of Pueblo, Col. to Louis J. Nichols was solemnized yesterday at 5 o'clock in the chapel room of the Atlanta Goodwill Industries.

The Rev. N. P. Manning officiated and music was presented by Mrs. Ernest Coppedge and Mrs. N. P. Manning.

Palms and white gladioli were used for decorations, with tall candelabra holding white tapers.

The bride wore a becoming dress of white crepe, with white accessories, and a shoulder spray of orchids.

After the ceremony the couple left for a wedding trip to the mountains. Upon their return they will reside at 493 North Highland avenue.

Auxiliary Officers Are Installed.

At the meeting of Harold Byrd Unit No. 66, American Legion Auxiliary, Decatur, Mrs. Vernon Frank, fifth district director, installed the following junior officers: President, Dorothy Wallace, who was re-elected; first vice president, Ina Wallace; second vice president, Marjorie Crow; secretary, Martha Feenster; corresponding secretary, Margaret McCormick; treasurer, Rheta Helble; chaplain, June DeBeauvoir; sergeant-at-arms, Ellinor Whiteford. The officers were presented flowers by Mrs. Frank. Mrs. W. E. Patterson, junior chairman, presented gifts to Dorothy Wallace and Margaret McCormick, drill team majorettes.

Mrs. Joseph is the former Miss Henrietta Hughes Colley, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Colley, of Grantville. Following their wedding trip, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph will make their home in New Orleans.

Miss Wheeler Becomes Bride Of Mr. Winchester at Church

Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Tevis Wheeler, became the bride of John Paul Winchester, son of the late Rev. and Mrs. Sirl Winchester, yesterday at a high noon ceremony taking place at All Saints' Episcopal church. The pastor, Rev. Theodore S. Will, officiated in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends of the young couple.

Appropriate musical program was presented on the organ by Joseph Regan. The altar was banked with palms and decorated with six candelabra and two large baskets filled with white flowers. Floor baskets of white gladioli, snapdragons and feverfew were arranged in the chancel, and the pews reserved for members of the two families were marked with white flowers and ribbons.

Plott Brice and Charles Hardin were the groomsmen and the ushers were A. Burton Anderson and Paul B. Hulifish.

Miss LaGrange Trussell, of Athens, was the maid of honor and was gowned in pink marquisette trimmed in alencon lace. The full bishop sleeves and the tight midriff were becoming features and her flowers were pink roses and delphinium.

Misses Jane LeRoux and Jeanette Cox were the bridesmaids and wore models similar to that of Miss Trussell.

The lovely bride entered with her father by whom she was given in marriage and was met at the altar by the groom and Thomas Hill, who was best man. She was handsomely gowned in a gown of chantilly lace posed over satin. Her finger-tip-length face veil fell in three tiers from a coronet of white flowers. She carried a white satin prayer book showered with white orchids and swainsons, which was given her at her confirmation by her godmother, Mrs. Thomas Jones, of Biloxi. Miss. Her only ornament was a pearl necklace, the gift of the groom.

Mrs. Wheeler, the bride's mother, was gowned in pink lace and a pink straw hat to match. Her flowers were orchids. Mrs. W. T. Wheeler, grandmother of the bride, wore cream lace and hat to match and her flowers were orchids.

Mrs. Wheeler entertained at a reception at their home on Plymouth road for their daughter and Mr. Winchester. The guests being limited to members of the wedding party, the out-of-town guests and the family. A profusion of white flowers were used in combination with greenery as the decorations throughout the home.

Assisting in entertaining were Miss Jean Hampton, Miss Dorothy See, Mrs. Paul B. Hulifish and Mrs. Ben Simpson.

During the afternoon Mr. Winchester and his bride left for a wedding trip to Florida and upon their return will reside at 1206 Peachtree street. The bride traveled in a navy blue silk model with white accessories and a white orchid.

Among out-of-town guests were Mrs. William T. Wheeler, of Louisville, Ky., grandmother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Cuyler Trussell, Mrs. LaGrange Denny, Miss Mary Trussell, Miss Katherine Trussell, of Athens; Miss Beth Arnold, West Palm Beach, Fla.; Miss Katherine Webb, of Tiffin; Miss Elizabeth Baggett, of Savannah; Mr. and Mrs. John Rowland, Macon; Mr. and Mrs. Gambrell McCarty, of Anniston, Ala., and others.

Veterans Honored By U. C. V. Camp.

Members of Camp Evan P. Howell U. C. V. No. 1825 were entertained at a chicken dinner recently at the home of the adjutant, Mrs. W. D. Langley, by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the camp. A program of music and readings was given following dinner.

Rev. George McLarty was guest speaker. Rev. Bernard Owens rendered vocal and piano solos. Miss Dixie Duvall gave a patriotic reading, followed by short talks made by Commander McWhorter Milner, Colonel Robert Lee Avery, Dr. Jim Avery, Rev. A. B. Dowling, of Griffin and the Soldiers' Home, and Colonel C. D. Dupree, also of the Soldiers' Home.

Invited guests included Miss Lillian Henderson, Mrs. Mary Goudelock, Mrs. J. W. Hollingsworth, Miss Lilah Shockley, Mesdames Chloe Sharp, Mink Gibson, L. D. Estes, Mae Rosser and J. W. Snellgrove.

Assisting the hostess were Mesdames T. S. Collins, A. H. Colston, J. E. Matthews, George Gentry and Mrs. Mary Hall and L. W. Howell.

Brush Hair To Relieve Ravages Of Sun

By Ida Jean Kain.

It may be a little late to warn you but there is such a thing as too much sun where your hair is concerned. If you are prematurely blonde and don't bother to protect your hair, it soon begins to look like straw. And if you are a brunette you're apt to turn into a monotone, with hair and skin the same shade.

In any case, a great deal of sun is not good for your hair. It tends to destroy the cystine content and the results are brittleness and splitting ends. Since the amount of sun your hair can stand depends on how much oil there is in it, you should make a rule of brushing your hair vigorously every day. In addition, you might use one of the hair oils.

Brushing is the best conditioner for your hair. Just as a matter of course, you should brush it 100 strokes a day. And when your hair is dry, you should boost the number to 300 strokes or more. That may sound like a lot of brushing, but some of the women noted for their beauty make a habit of brushing their hair for 30 to 40 minutes daily.

Use the brush in an up-and-out stroke and at the end of the stroke turn the brush slightly to give the roots an extra tug and stimulate the circulation in your scalp. Never use a wire brush—it breaks the hair and irritates the scalp.

Before you wash your hair, give it a thorough brushing and then afterwards massage the clean scalp with a cream or tonic containing oil. The soap should not be too strong nor the water too hot as strong alkali solutions and heat cause your hair to break.

If you are losing your hair, the trouble may be lack of brushing, your diet, or your health. Nobody can promise that a certain food will give you beautiful hair but we do know that protein is the element needed for building material throughout the body. It is the chief component of muscles, tissues and organs on the inside, and of skin, hair and nails on the outside.

The complete protein foods are milk, eggs, cheese and meat and are an essential part of your balanced diet. There is no doubt that they contribute to hair beauty. But you must also have the fruits, vegetables and whole grains that are needed to balance your menus.

Unless you follow a well-balanced diet, your hair may show the ill effects long before your health is affected. Worry and strain also are factors in the condition of health and hair.

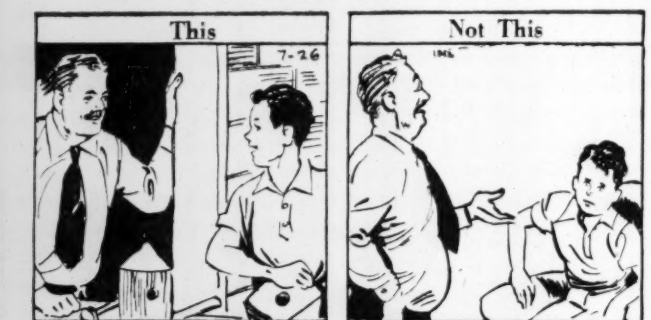

Next to regular brushing, the best solution most of us could make would be to have our hair waved the day before it looks stringy instead of a couple of days later. After waving, a thorough brushing should be given. And the more you brush your permanent the better it looks.

Don't under any circumstances when you're a guest in a home join in any family discussion or take sides even though pressed.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Father: "I wish you to make as many of your own decisions as possible, but because I've had more life experience than you, it is sometimes necessary for you to accept my decisions."
The word "boss" is not part of the used vocabulary of the democratic family.

Lacy Doilies for Thrifty Luncheon Set

PATTERN 7050. Entertaining is much more fun when you have a supply of lacy doilies on hand. These, in three sizes make lovely luncheon and buffet sets. Crochet them. Pattern 7050 contains instructions for making doilies; illustrations of them and stitches; photograph of doily; materials needed.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in coin to Household Arts Department, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

The classic button-front dress is again a fall favorite. Note the simplicity and the unusual crescent pockets.

Essential Element of Success Is a Knowledge of Etiquette

What's it all about? Young men who "never thought much about manners" often wake up to find they can't get anywhere without them. Then there seems such a lot to learn!

There isn't really. Almost overnight you can learn the courtesies the sophisticated young crowd expects of you. Start checking now.

Q. What is the etiquette when a man and a girl get out of a car?
A. He gets out first and offers a supporting arm on which she may rest her hand if she wishes. But he never grasps her arm or pulls her.

Q. When should the girl precede the man?
A. Going through doorways and getting into vehicles. She is also first to follow the usher in a movie theater or the headwaiter in a restaurant. And she leaves a theater or restaurant first, too.

Q. What are some of the points to remember when asked to dinner?

A. Arrive not more than five minutes before or after the dinner hour. At table the man pulls out the chair of the lady on his right. When leaving, thank your hostess for a lovely time, but do not say "Thank you for the dinner."

Our 40-page booklet, Etiquette for the Teens, answers your questions about what to do on dates, dances, parties, visits, trips; when entertaining, attending movies, motoring. Gives advice on petting, proms.

Woman's Quiz

Q. Are carpets and rugs injured by beating them?

A. Beating loosens the pile tufts and may injure the backing. However, if a vacuum cleaner is not available and it is impossible to send floor coverings to a cleaner once a year, it may be necessary to beat them.

Rattan beaters injure rugs less than wire ones. The rugs should be placed nap down on grass, and should never be beaten while hanging on a line.

Girl's Best Technique Is Time-Approved Method Of Playing Hard-to-Get

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie:

I have been going with a boy 18 months and he has asked me to marry him. He tells me he loves me very much, although I do not think I love him. I have thought the matter over a great deal and I just cannot make up my mind. He is very high tempered and gets mad when anyone speaks to me. I have a friend who lives out of town and I have known him for about 10 years. When he comes to see me my other beau is furious, won't talk and tries to get me to go out so as not to have a date with the out-of-town man. But I always stay at home and have the date. Don't you think I am right? This man who wants me to marry him thinks I should be at home every time he calls me and every time he wants to come by to see me. He is very nice and sweet, however, and is liked by everyone. He has given me some presents and I would like to know if I should return them in case I should break up with him?

JUST EIGHTEEN.

Don't pay any attention to the way your beau acts in regard to your having dates with your out-of-town friend. That is, unless you are engaged to him, and then I do not think you should cater to his wishes 100 per cent. If you do not feel that you love him I would not make any promises of marriage.

I think you are exactly right about staying at home and having the date with the boy from out of town, and if you like him continue to do so. All the boys expect the girls to be at home waiting by the telephone for them to call, or sitting in parlor waiting for a visit, but the girl who keeps the boy guessing, and who makes herself a little bit inaccessible is the girl who uses the best technique. As for returning gifts, that is a matter which you will have to decide for yourself. If you do not want them, return them. If you would like to keep them, it will be all right. I think if I were you I would stop going with him for a while. That is the best test for your feeling for him.

RUDE BOY IS BEST FORGOTTEN

Dear Dixie:

I am 13. After school was out I met a boy. It was love at first sight and we went together for some time, but lately he acts funny. He goes with two girls whom I know. I saw him at a movie recently with one of my used-to-be friends. He left her and came over and sat with me. Do you think by him leaving her that he likes me? He has broken my heart. BROKEN-HEART.

Just mend your heart and go on and have a good time, but do not take the boys and their actions too seriously. I think the boy acted very rudely to leave the girl in the movie and come over and talk with you. I do not doubt that he may like you and wanted to be with you, but he doesn't sound as though he would be a very nice person to go around with. Suppose he had left you and gone to the other girl in the show? It would not have been nice, would it?

If you need help with some problem, Dixie George will be glad to try to give you advice. Just write her in care of The Atlanta Constitution.

MY DAY: Across a Continent For a Day's Visit

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Thursday.—We reached Washington, D. C., in time for lunch yesterday and the visitors began to arrive at once. I did have a little time to talk over one or two important family things with the President before he was again engulfed in government affairs, and I was chatting with various people.

At 4:40 I went to the airport with Jimmie and Rommie, who were starting for the west coast, and waited to meet my daughter, who was coming in from Seattle, Wash., to attend Mayor LaGuardia's meeting on civilian volunteer participation in defense.

Anna was about 20 minutes late, which meant that a gentleman who was waiting to hand me a gift for the President sent by the mayor of an English city, had to wait for nearly 20 minutes. However, he was very kind about it. Afterwards Dr. Frederick Douglas Patterson, the president of Tuskegee Institute, came to tell me how well the training of the flying cadets is progressing there, and that Tuskegee is being named as a recreational area for Negro men on leave from Fort Benning.

The Crown Princess of Norway and her party left to return to Massachusetts on an evening train. Our only other dinner guests were Dr. Floyd Reeves, of the American Youth Commission, and Dr. James Meader, of Russell Sage College. The latter told me of a most interesting week which Russell Sage College is going to arrange in October, in which the city of Troy, N. Y., will participate. The college will celebrate its 25th anniversary with Pan-American Week, during which the citizens of Troy will become familiar with the countries of Central and South America under as many different aspects as possible. They hope that their program may serve as a suggestion for doing the same thing in many other localities, which will create a greater sense of friendliness in this hemisphere.

Today has been given up entirely to the meeting held in the White House by Mayor LaGuardia's committee. Its members have been named from every corps and represent all the different interests that enter into our national life. The President received the whole group and spoke to them for a few minutes and then the mayor proceeded to outline his general ideas.

After lunch, the details were taken up and I hope that every member of the committee will go home knowing what the first steps in this program actually mean in the way of work. The future alone can tell how it will develop.

Anna goes back to Seattle tonight, and I feel that we have stolen a very happy 24 hours at a time I had not expected to see her. The President and I will leave almost at the same time by train for Hyde Park. I am delighted that we are going to have these few days there in spite of the world events which seem more threatening in every way.

Electric Treatment of Tonsils Advised

By Dr. William Brady.

Reader in her 50's writes that in her 20's both tonsils were removed under local anesthesia. Immediately after the operation, which took 2 1/2 hours, she returned to her regular office work and continued her regular work right along.

After 12 years her tonsils were removed again, this time by an excellent specialist, she says. Her own physician advised the second operation, she says, because her heart was very slow.

I can't conceive why a physician should consider removal of tonsils necessary for that reason, but no matter—perhaps the patient misunderstood the physician's explanation. She had no doubt of the throat specialist's eminence, however, for she states that he operates daily in one of the largest hospitals. If it were in one of the smallest hospitals, ah, well, the poor woman has endured enough without any sarcastic cracks from me.

Well, then, this great specialist, too, operated under local anesthesia. As he worked he made the facetious remark that "I'm going clear down to your stomach to get this out." This time, by golly, there was to be no half-way business. We must get every last bit of tonsil out.

Remember, now, all I know about it is what the patient tells me in a letter. Here I think it fitting to say that it seems to me that the surgeon erred in that very effort. I speak merely as a plodding old door-to-door practitioner, but still I have the temerity to say that there is no scientific basis and no justification for such radical surgery in the treatment of any tonsil trouble save possibly cancer.

The eminent throat specialist made no test of the coagulation time prior to operation. A few hours after the operation the patient had a serious hemorrhage. She lost seven pounds weight in a few hours. Finally, the bleeding was stopped by stitches in the throat.

As the wound began to heal the patient began to notice constant unpleasant taste, her tongue seemed "asleep." Now, several years later, she still suffers constantly from mouth symptoms, which we need not describe but which she feels sure are the result of destruction of the nerve supply of salivary glands by the radical surgery—and likely as not she is right about that.

She writes to ask me to warn people that the tonsils are not to be completely removed, but only diseased portions, so that the delicate nerves underneath may not be injured irreparably.

Without being too specific concerning the ill consequences of such half-baked surgery, I have been warning the public against that line of hokum for several years. It is one reason why I advocate electro-coagulation (diathermy) rather than excision, as the method of choice for the treatment of infected tonsils in every case where it may be applicable.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Hydrocele.

Son has a hydrocele. One doctor drew the fluid out with a syringe and instructed him to return for repetition of the treatment. Another doctor advised operation. Which is the correct method? (Mrs. A. B. T.)

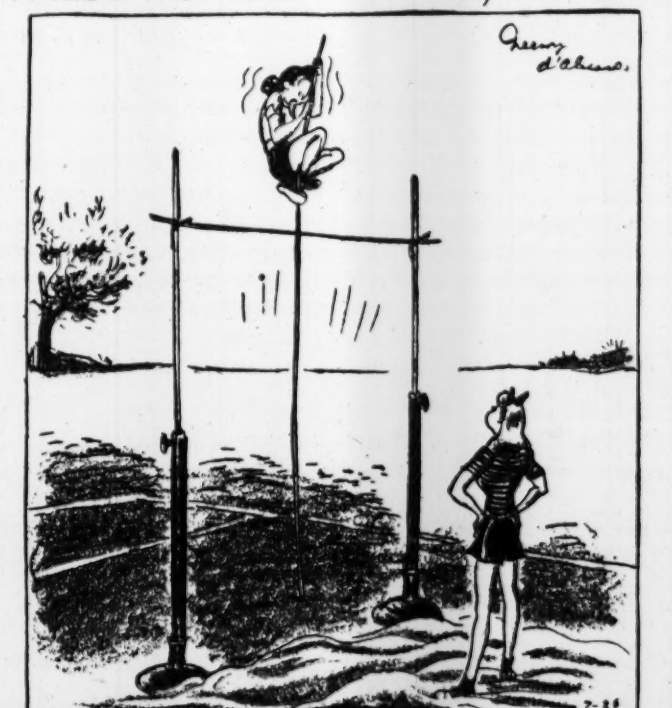

Answer: Only exceptionally is tapping, that is, withdrawing the fluid with syringe, curative—that has to be repeated indefinitely. In some cases cure is affected by injection treatment, which does not interrupt the patient's work or ordinary activities. In some cases only operation which obliterates the sac, will cure. Some physicians have reported cures by reinjecting intramuscularly a syringe of the fluid withdrawn from the swelling. Hydrocele is merely an excessive accumulation of the serum or clear fluid a few drops of which are normally present in the sac to prevent friction the same serum as that present in the pleural sac around the lungs, the peritoneal sac or cavity around the abdominal organs and in the pericardium or sac around the heart.

Breathing and Congestion. Would it be safe for one subject to hemorrhoids to practice belly breathing? (C. F. M., D.D.S.)

Answer—In fact it would be beneficial. Send stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask for monograph, "Belly Breathing" and "It is Stupid to Suffer From Piles."

THESE WOMEN -- By d'Alessio

"See what I mean? I can get up all right, but then I'm afraid to come down!"

Tailored in the softer manner is the glen plaid sports suit worn by Susan Hayward, Paramount player. The jacket features two large patch pockets and a little-boy collar. Her wide-brimmed hat is a French felt trimmed with a long pheasant feather.

Stylists Approve Woolens for Evening

LONDON, July 25.—Once again we have been tantalized by a lovely collection of clothes destined to be worn by our happier sisters in the United States and overseas. Geoffrey Fox is one of our younger courtiers. His name may not mean much to you. But watch it. Experts here have been enthusiastic about him for some time and all are agreed that this new autumn collection might have come straight from Paris.

In addition to the exquisitely cut tweed suits which all British designers make to perfection, Mr. Fox goes in for evening dresses in the new printed woolens, so soft that they can be cut on lovely Grecian lines. All his evening frocks, though feminine in the extreme, are practical. Most have long or elbow-length sleeves and high necks.

They sometimes are embellished with medallions worn round the neck on a long chain. Occasionally they have short matching tailored jackets, and one or two have fur trimming around the neck. For daytime wear, his skirts are still knee-length and tight, though sometimes the tightness is lessened by concealed pleats. Necks are high and military, with upstanding collars and most jackets button right up.

"This pouched back effect is featured on several of the evening frocks which are notable also for their lovely draping. This is particularly noticeable in Grecian Grace, which has lines as beautiful as in any Greek fresco. It is in Royal purple, draped over lime green.

An attractive evening model in printed wool in a bluish flowered pattern trimmed with plain strips of blue taffeta lived up to its name "Siesta," being cut on elaborate negligee lines.

A more formal evening gown, "Heartbreak," made of clinging black wool, had a black velvet waistband and a broad band of the velvet round the full hem. The dress was cut low at the back and had butterfly sleeves of black net. A beautifully draped dress in pale blue wool had a high neck and long tight sleeves worked with beads.

A dinner dress in cream wool—"Bo Peep"—had epaulette sleeves and a smoked skirt. It was fastened at the back with black velvet ribbons. A more sophisticated gown, "Mandarin Mood," was of emerald green, draped close to the figure and opening at the side to reveal a scarlet lining. It had padded shoulders, and on the right breast a large scarlet and gold dragon had been worked. "Golden Vanity" was of gold brocade, pleated and buttoned up the back, while a black dress, "Rumba Rhythm," had a bold black and white striped bow sticking stiffly out at one side and this black and white striping is used to edge the skirt and neck.

All-Purpose Frock With Princess Lines

By Lillian Mae.

The "find" of the season is this tailored frock for day-long, all-purpose wear! It's Pattern 4811 and a Lillian Mae style. The buttoning down the front makes nice lines and is a convenient device for speedy dressing and ironing. There are no waistline seams—just front and back princess lines that curve at the shoulders for grace and easy, perfect fit. The side bodice sections are gathered, creating flattering bustline softness. The notched collar is crisp, young and very becoming. You may choose short, three-quarter or long sleeves, and, if you've a flare for color, have the front paneling and collar in harmonizing contrast.

Pattern 4811 is available in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3 yards 35-inch fabric and 1 3/4 yards contrast.

Send 15 cents in coins for this Lillian Mae pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly size, name, address and style number.

MRS. HAROLD BERNARD LEVIN.

Miss Meyer and Dr. Levin Married at Temple Study

The marriage of Miss Sylvia Leah Meyer to Dr. Harold Bernard Levin, of Wilmington, N. C., formerly of Atlanta, was quietly solemnized Saturday evening, July 19, at 7 o'clock at the Temple study. Dr. David Marx officiated.

The bride is the lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Andrew Meyer, and is the sister of Miss Julia Meyer. The bride's mother is the former Miss Linda Farberstein, of Athens. Her father, Mr. Meyer, formerly resided in Savannah.

Mrs. Levin attended Commercial High school and Oglethorpe University. At the latter institution she was pledged to the Beta Phi Alpha sorority, a member of the Duchess Club and vice president of the freshman class.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Levin, of Atlanta, and the brother of I. Levin, H. Levin, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; A. B. Levin, of Atlanta; Bill Levin, of Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. Lewis Berger, of Chicago, Ill., and Mrs. Jack Braver, of Dalton.

Dr. Levin attended Boys' High school, Emory University, Pre-medical school and the University School of Medicine in Augusta. He is a member of the Phi Delta Epsilon medical fraternity. For the past two years he has been an interne at Grady hospital.

Dr. Levin is a first lieutenant, Medical Corps Reserves, U. S. A., and is now on active duty at Camp Davis hospital, Coastal Artillery, in Wilmington, N. C., where he and his bride will reside.

Y. W. C. A. Announces Staff For 'Fun-in-Town' Program

The staff for the Y. W. C. A. "Fun-in-Town" has been completed, and Miss Betsy Dupuy, Girl Reserve secretary, announces that Monday morning, July 28 will find everything in readiness for a well-rounded program of games, classes, swimming, worship, storytelling, music and weekly trips to Camp Highland.

Miss Georgia Hunt, Agnes Scott graduate and teacher in Atlanta schools, who worked out excellent worship services with the girls last year, will return this summer. Handicrafts will be under the direction of Miss Virginia Collar, student at G. S. C. W. and former Camp Highland counselor. She will be assisted by Miss Janet Dinsmore, Agnes Scott student, and Miss Lucy Cantrell, junior assistant at Camp Highland.

Mrs. Edwin McKay, of the Y staff, will teach swimming; Miss Gayle Rankin, Agnes Scott, folk dancing, assisted by Miss Ruth Walker, a graduate of West Fulton and Girl Reserve leader.

Miss Jacqueline Odom, president of the Girl Reserve Club at North Fulton, whose special interest at the Southern Girl Reserve conference was recreation, will be taught by Miss Betty Jean Radford, junior assistant at Camp Highland; cooking by Miss Ruth Hertzka, Agnes Scott graduate, who assisted last winter with the Leisure Time cooking.

The story-telling hour will be directed by Miss Ruth Connor, Randolph Macon student; singing by Miss Betsy Dupuy; social activities by Miss Anne Mitchell, recent graduate of William and Mary College.

"Fun-in-Town" program is open to any girls from 10 to 17 years of age, beginning July 28 and lasting until August 22. Classes are held from 9:30 to 2:30 o'clock Monday through Fridays, and registration must be made at the Y. W. C. A. on Fridays preceding Monday classes. No late registrations will be accepted. Further information may be secured by calling WA. 8961.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adkins Turner, whose marriage was recently solemnized, were photographed leaving the Sacred Heart church after the wedding. Mrs. Turner is the former Miss Ernestine Egart, daughter of Mrs. John B. Egart.

Comedy Rules In This Week's Cinema Parade

Four Topnotch Pictures Listed on First-Run Screens.

By DUDLEY GLASS.

Comedy rules the first-run screens in Atlanta for the movie week which started yesterday.

My favorite is "Tom, Dick and Harry," at the Fox, with "Ring-side Maisie," at the Grand, a good second. The Paramount presents Loretta Young in a story of the 1870's in Wyoming called "The Lady of Cheyenne." On the serious side is "Washington Melodrama," at the Rialto.

GINGER ROGERS' PROBLEM IS TOO MANY LOVERS

Brightest and best-directed comedy I've seen in a long time—though I confess I've missed a number of them—is "Tom, Dick and Harry," at the Fox.

Ginger Rogers, returning to light comedy without music or dancing, is delicious as the telephone girl who can't make up her mind. She is dumb—but not so terribly dumb.

Burgess Meredith is given the fattest male role and naturally runs away with the show in his scenes. George Murphy is the more quiet wooer and Alan Marshall the handsome millionaire. Ginger finds herself engaged to all of them at once—but I'm not going to reveal her final choice.

The direction, by Garson Kanin, proves him a rival for Frank Capra in handling light comedy scenes. His handling of the fantastic illusion in Ginger's three dreams—one after meeting each suitor—is delightful.

Miss Rogers is not so gorgeous as when she danced with Astaire but that's the fault of her costumes, a telephone girl's working clothes. But she does have a few moments of bridal white.

"Information Please" is as entertaining as always.

ANN SOTHERN AS MAISIE GETS IN FIGHT GAME

Addicts of J. Walter Ruben's "Maisie" series, and there must be many, will find plenty of entertainment in the current installment, "Ring-side Maisie," at Loew's Grand.

Ann Sothern, of course, is the girl from Brooklyn. This time she starts in as a taxi-dancer, is monopolized by a jitterbug with a mile of tickets, can't take any more of his mauling and loses her job. That jitterbug, Roy Lester, is on the screen briefly—but he's a revelation in rug-cutting.

The scene shifts to a summer resort hotel, where Maisie thinks she has a job. But she runs into a boxer's training camp—and more trouble.

Here she meets the young fighter, Robert Sterling, and his trainer, the noted Maxie Rosenbloom, and inurs the wrath of the manager, George Murphy, who wants no girls around his camp. And gets fired again. Maisie is always starting out to walk somewhere—and always gets a pickup.

There's the old fight story—victory and defeat and invalid mother and the hard-boiled guy with the heart of gold. The author contrived to keep it entertaining.

I also liked a short subject about New York's Bowery and its down-and-outs. If made me feel I'm not in such a tough spot, after all.

LORETTA GOES TO BAT FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE

"The Lady From Cheyenne," at the Paramount, is interesting because it presents Loretta Young in a story of the earlier Wyoming and a bunch of "characters," which means any man with a walrus moustache who wears a gun and spits tobacco juice. I liked it.

Loretta goes west as a schoolteacher, Edwin Arnold, the scheming villain, has her schoolhouse burned down. The gang wants Loretta's land for their nefarious schemes but she won't sell. Frank Craven, the local editor, comes to her defense and loses his life.

So Loretta goes to the legislature to fight for votes for women, which would get rid of the crooks. She has a pretty tough time there.

Robert Preston is the leading man and great lover. Gladys George and Jessie Ralph help out. And Willie Best, that nutty Negro in "Who Killed Aunt Maggie," doesn't hurt the picture a bit.

WASHINGTON INTRIGUE SHOW UP AT RIALTO

A story of politics in the national capital and intrigues dealing with international affairs is told in "Washington Melodrama," at the Rialto.

Hardly to be classed as comedy, it does offer excellent entertainment, besides the story of the machinations of the plotters.

Ann Rutherford is the pretty girl around whom such affairs seem inevitably to center. Frank Morgan is the American philanthropist who wants to feed starving Europeans and finds obstacles in the way. Kent Taylor is the fine young man who helps solve the problem.

There is a spectacular "aquacade" scene with diving girls and several bright musical numbers are introduced.

Age Limits Raised

For Killing Calves

State Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder and State Chemist C. R. Clark yesterday amended Georgia's slaughter house regulations to provide that "no calf shall be slaughtered or meat thereof sold, or offered for sale, for human food, less than 21 days old."

The previous regulations set a 10-day minimum, but Linder pointed out he was receiving complaints that calves were being slaughtered and sold for food too young.

The old stove brings new cash when advertised through the Want Ads of The Constitution.

AAA Program For Peanuts Is Discussed

All-Day Conference Held in Capital on Pace Bill Act.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP)—Details of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's peanut marketing program under the recently enacted Pace bill were discussed at an all-day conference today between AAA officials and representatives of growers and the trade.

Participating were spokesmen for growers, shellers and crushers from throughout the peanut belt, as well as manufacturers' representatives.

Representative Pace, of Georgia, author of the bill passed by congress earlier this year authorizing establishment of marketing quotas for peanuts, said the conference "canvassed the whole peanut situation," but discussion dwelt principally with the proper price for this year.

It was the general opinion of the conference, Pace said, that peanut parity prices should be fixed at 85 per cent of the current market price of $124 per ton.

Marketing quotas for peanuts, as authorized by the Pace bill, are to be allotted quotas on an acreage basis, and be permitted to sell for edible purposes all production on their allotted acreage. Penalties of 3 cents a pound would apply to peanuts produced on excess acreage sold for edible purposes, but not against any peanuts diverted into crushing for oil or other non-edible uses.

New York City's Rich Farmers Will Hold Fair

Exposition To Feature Bond Peddlers Who Sell Eggs on Side.

NEW YORK, July 25.—(AP)—New York City's millionaire farmers—those weekend agriculturists who peddle bonds down in Wall street and sell eggs on the side—are going to have a county fair right in the middle of this towered town.

From September 10 to 20 the gentlemen farmers and sundry others are going to pack Madison Square Garden with everything from pigs to pickles, thus reviving New York's 113-year-old county fair, last held in 1897.

The exposition will be sponsored by the American Institute of the City of New York, which was chartered in 1828 to operate the fair for the farmers of Manhattan island and thereabouts.

There are still some farms nearby and even in the city—the Rockefeller, for instance, have a farm on a Radio City terrace 11 stories above Fifth avenue.

Dr. H. H. Sheldon, fair director, says there will be a midway in the finest—and nicest—tradition with a "great show with color, music and fun," but minus the old shell games and the strip tease.

There will be rows of jams and jellies, pies, and lots of flowers and vegetables, and needlework. Dairy and beef cattle and hogs and sheep and poultry will be shipped in from New York's Long island and nearby upstate farms.

There will be a real silo and displays of modern farm and farm home equipment.

For Killing Calves

State Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder and State Chemist C. R. Clark yesterday amended Georgia's slaughter house regulations to provide that "no calf shall be slaughtered or meat thereof sold, or offered for sale, for human food, less than 21 days old."

The previous regulations set a 10-day minimum, but Linder pointed out he was receiving complaints that calves were being slaughtered and sold for food too young.

The old stove brings new cash when advertised through the Want Ads of The Constitution.

WASHINGTON INTRIGUE SHOW UP AT RIALTO

A story of politics in the national capital and intrigues dealing with international affairs is told in "Washington Melodrama," at the Rialto.

Hardly to be classed as comedy, it does offer excellent entertainment, besides the story of the machinations of the plotters.

Ann Rutherford is the pretty girl around whom such affairs seem inevitably to center. Frank Morgan is the American philanthropist who wants to feed starving Europeans and finds obstacles in the way. Kent Taylor is the fine young man who helps solve the problem.

There is a spectacular "aquacade" scene with diving girls and several bright musical numbers are introduced.

Age Limits Raised

Michigan Joins With Georgia In Fight on Trucking Obstacles

Chairman Walter R. McDonald, of the State Public Service Commission, said yesterday that Michigan, Indiana, Illinois and Ohio might join with Georgia in a concerted effort to remove what he called the trade barrier created by Kentucky's 18,000-pound weight limit on trucks.

Efforts of Georgia and Kentucky to reach a reciprocal motor vehicle agreement have been snarled up for weeks, and McDonald said he and Public Service Commissioner John E. Goodwin would fly to Kentucky Monday in a final attempt to work out an accord.

McDonald made public here copies of letters that Examiner Lynn Munshaw, of the Michigan Public Service Commission, had written to motor vehicle officials of Indiana, Illinois and Ohio proposing that they join in an effort to obtain a reciprocal agreement with Kentucky.

Munshaw referred to the Kentucky-Georgia negotiations and wrote, "I feel at this time if we are ever going to have reciprocity the way it should be with the state of Kentucky, that now is the time to make our demands so that a free flow of traffic can be maintained between the north and the south."

"I see no reason why at this time during our national emergency that one state should cause so much hardship among the carriers and the industry. I believe if we can work together on this situation our demands will be well received."

In sending McDonald copies of the letters, Munshaw said he thought that "trade barriers must be eliminated between states" in a period of national emergency and expressed hope that the five states would be successful in their negotiations with Kentucky.

McDonald said the Georgia commission would co-operate fully with the other states.

Russell To Use Defense Theme In Jasper Talk

Dedication Event Also Will Feature Tamag, Arnall.

Senator Russell announced yesterday he would key his address around national defense today when he appears on the same platform with the Governor and Attorney General Ellis Arnall.

The Governor already has announced he would review the first six months of his administration along with charges against two ousted state educators, while Attorney General Arnall said he would make a plea for state and national unity.

The significance of the Jasper celebration, which will include the dedication of the Amicalola Falls Rural Electric Co-operative, will be that Georgians probably will get a fairly definite idea of what the issues will be in next year's election, since all three will be candidates either for Governor or the United States senate.

Senator Russell is sure to run for re-election and some observers say he will be opposed by the Governor, who is still a question mark. Arnall is only waiting until time to make his announcement for Governor.

The attorney general is expected to praise Senator Russell and continue his indirect attacks on the Governor.

In addition to discussing national defense, Senator Russell said he also would lead the REA program and discuss recent farm legislation. He is seeking to have the government loan on peanuts played at the maximum allowed under the law, 85 per cent of market value.

Congressman Frank Whelchel, of Gainesville, also will speak.

Nucky Johnson Is Convicted on U.S. Tax Counts

Atlantic City Politician Is To Be Sentenced Friday.

CAMDEN, N. J., July 25.—(AP)—Enoch L. (Nucky) Johnson, Atlantic City Republican leader, was convicted today by a federal jury of two counts of an indictment charging income tax evasion. He was acquitted on a third count.

The verdict convicted the 58-year-old Atlantic county treasurer of evading income tax for the years 1936 and 1937, but acquitted him of a charge of failing to pay income tax in 1935.

The government accused Johnson of evading payment of $39,800 for the three years on an income of $199,226. A major portion of this income, the government contended, came as protection money from numbers operators in the shore resort.

Judge Albert B. Maris, who presided at the 10-day trial, increased Johnson's bail from $5,000 to $25,000 and announced he would impose sentence next Friday at 9 a. m.

The two counts on which he was convicted charged that he failed to report $62,600 income received from numbers operators in 1936 and a similar amount from the same source in 1937.

The count on which he was found innocent charged that in 1935 he failed to report $28,000 profit assertedly received from construction of the Atlantic City Union railway station and $46,400 from numbers operators.

Federal Grand Jury Will Convene Monday

Federal grand jury will convene for a three-day adjourned session at 10 o'clock Monday morning for the consideration of what District Attorney Lawrence Camp described as "routine matters."

A number of liquor cases and automobile thefts are understood to be scheduled for investigation.

Judge E. Marvin Underwood drew a new venire of prospective jurors yesterday to fill vacancies created in the group since it adjourned last March. Seven names have been taken off the original list because of death, removal from the city or because the juror was excused from duty, attaches of the clerk's office said.

Ellis Arnall Speaks Before Undertakers

Undertakers in the fifth congressional district last night heard Attorney General Ellis Arnall at an alfresco steak fry given by Harry G. Poole at his Cascade road estate.

In addition to nearly a dozen Atlanta undertakers, other undertakers of Fulton, DeKalb, Rockdale and Gwinnett counties attended.

IN GEORGIA

PRIVATE PRIVILEGE

With the words "Army of the United States" stamped in gold on the front cover, several thousand pocket Bibles will be distributed to enlisted men within the next few weeks, officials of the Fourth Corps Area headquarters announced yesterday.

Three types of Testaments—one of each of the three major religious groups, will be presented in the name of the commander-in-chief at formal ceremonies.

Over the facsimile signature of the President the Testaments will carry the following words: "As commander-in-chief I take pleasure in commending the reading of the Bible to all who serve in the armed forces of the United States. Throughout the centuries men of many faiths and diverse origins have found in the Sacred Book words of wisdom, counsel and inspiration. It is a fountain of strength now, as always, and aids in attaining the highest aspirations of the human soul."

ATLANTA IS PROMOTED AT SCOTT FIELD, ILL. Major Rufus B. Davidson, Atlanta now serving as executive officer of the provisional school group at Scott Field, Ill., has been promoted to the grade of temporary lieutenant colonel.

Colonel Davidson has had a brilliant military career since joining the Army as a flying cadet in 1918 and earned his wings at Barron Field, Fort Worth, Tex., soloing after three hours and 22 minutes of instruction.

At the height of the battleship versus airplane controversy in 1921, Colonel Davidson acted as deputy director in participating in the experimental bombings of obsolete battleships, and the following year was appointed an instructor in the military department of Georgia Tech, where he served until 1926.

PARACHUTE BATTALION PROVES POPULAR The comparatively new Army task, service in the parachute battalion, is proving popular with officers and enlisted men. Officers from all over the country attending the Army infantry school at Fort Benning are constantly inquiring about duty with parachute troops and the War Department reports 3,673 volunteers for the 1,500 openings in the jumping battalion.

Requirements are rigid. Only unmarried volunteers are accepted and they must pass strict physical examinations, have at least six months' service in the regular Army and must have at least one year more of their enlistment to serve.

FIVE BENNING OFFICERS ORDERED TO SANTA MONICA Five Fort Benning officers have been ordered to report to Santa Monica for duty as ferry pilots. The officers, who are to ferry military aircraft from Santa Monica to various Army fields throughout the country are Captain John T. Mooney, First Lieutenant Thomas Fletcher Jr. and Second Lieutenants Wendell C. Croom, Klem F. Kaiberer and James T. McKee.

U. S. APPROVES AIR CORPS SCHOOL AT ALBANY Construction of an Air Corps flying school, estimated to cost $1,194,820, at Albany, Ga., has been approved by the War Department.

ARMY PERSONALS Charlie W. Bradley, on duty at Fort McPherson, has been assigned to the medical detachment, Starke General Hospital, in Charleston, S. C.

Andrews, of Lumberton, N. C., has been appointed commanding officer of the newly organized fire department at Lawson Field.

Private John Mitchell Kuser, 62nd air base, Lawson Field, Fort Benning, has already scored one bull's eye during his seven weeks in the Army. He tallied 150 points, a perfect score, in the general classification test to determine the eligibility of Air Corps men for technical schools at Chanute Field, Ill.
